

This is the official bulletin of The Pennsylvania State University. Graduate program and Graduate Council requirements are those in effect at the time of admission to a graduate degree program.

The University reserves the right to change the requirements and regulations listed here and to determine whether a student has satisfactorily met requirements for admission or graduation, and to reject any applicant for any reason the University determines to be material to the applicant's qualifications to pursue higher education. Nothing in this material should be considered a guarantee that completion of a program and graduation from the University will result in employment.

The Graduate Council has responsibility for and authority over all academic information contained in the Graduate Degree Programs Bulletin.

Program Locations

Programs of graduate study are offered at five locations in Pennsylvania:

- Penn State Erie- <http://psbehrend.psu.edu>
- Penn State Harrisburg- - www.hbg.psu.edu
- College of Medicine- www.pennstatehershey.org/web/college/home
- Penn State Great Valley- - www.gv.psu.edu
- University Park campus- <http://www.gradschool.psu.edu>

Off-site courses--Graduate degree programs based at any of the five administrative centers of the Graduate School listed previously, but offered at locations away from those centers, may be discontinued at any time. Degree candidates will be eligible to continue the program, but this may require attendance at courses offered only at the center where the program is based. The University will provide notice of the discontinuance of any program offered at an off-center site at least one semester in advance and furnish information concerning available options for continuance in the program.

GRADUATE LIFE

Current graduate enrollment at University Park campus is about 6,790 students, of whom 78 percent are engaged in graduate study full time, 47 percent are women, and 35 percent are residents of Pennsylvania. (Undergraduate enrollment at University Park campus exceeds 40,000.) International students make up about 35 percent of the graduate student population, and about 8 percent of enrolling graduate students report themselves as members of recognized U.S. ethnic minority groups.

University Park campus is one of the most naturally beautiful American campuses. On any given day of the semester, about 50,000 people will be on the campus: 38,000 students, 12,000 employees, and several hundred visitors. Although the size of the campus can be intimidating, graduate students soon find that its size and diversity afford a variety of stimulating activities. This variety reflects the University's view that a person's graduate experience should include, in addition to course work and research, living in a scholarly atmosphere, profiting from the perspectives of visiting scholars and artists, and engaging in informal discussions with faculty and fellow students. It also should mean participating in student affairs and University governance, and allowing time to reflect, to explore fields related to one's specialty, and to enjoy leisure activities.

Although the mailing address of the largest campus is University Park, PA 16802, this name ordinarily does not appear on maps. The University Park campus is located in State College, Pennsylvania, an area with a population of more than 67,000. State College is located on U.S. Highway 322, near Interstates 80 and 99, and can be reached directly by bus or airline service. The town retains a collegiate atmosphere enhanced by many small shops, restaurants, cinemas, and bookstores.

REGULATIONS AND CONDUCT STANDARDS FOR STUDENTS ENROLLED IN THE GRADUATE SCHOOL

It is the responsibility of students to be cognizant of the rules, regulations, and procedures of the University. This information is contained in the graduate school policies at www.gradsch.psu.edu/policies (Opens New Window).

MOTOR VEHICLE REGULATIONS

STANDARDS OF CONDUCT

By virtue of their maturity and experience, graduate students are expected to have learned the meaning and value of personal honesty and professional integrity before entering the Graduate School. Every student is expected to exhibit and promote the highest ethical and moral standards. A violation of such standards is regarded as a serious offense, raising grave doubt that the student is worthy of continued membership in the Graduate School community. The University Code of Conduct is found in Appendix I in this Bulletin. Violation of the Code may result in suspension or dismissal from the academic program and/or from the Graduate School. For additional information, please go to www.sa.psu.edu/ja.

Research Integrity--Graduate students are expected to adhere to the highest standards of research integrity in the conduct of their research and other educational activities. They are subject to University policy AD-47, "General Standards of Professional Ethics," and RA-10 "Handling Inquiries/Investigations into Questions of Ethics in Research and in Other Scholarly Activities," which apply to all University personnel engaged in research activities. This policy may be accessed electronically through the University's General University Reference Utility (GURU). For information on Research Integrity, please go to guru.psu.edu/policies/RA10.html. ## Application and Admission Procedures

Each step of the educational process, from admission through graduation, requires continuing review and appropriate approval by University officials. The University, therefore, reserves the right to change the requirements and regulations contained in this bulletin and to determine whether a student has satisfactorily met its requirements for admission or graduation, and to reject any applicant for admission for any reason the University determines to be material to the applicant's qualification to pursue higher education.

An applicant for admission to the Graduate School should understand that graduate work is not a simple extension of an undergraduate program but, rather, demands scholarship of a higher order, and emphasizes research, creativity, and professional competence with a minimum of formal requirements and a maximum of student initiative and responsibility.

Objective--The objective of the admission process of the Graduate School is to identify and admit a qualified graduate student body up to the limit of the University's resources to provide outstanding graduate programs. In most programs, a student may begin graduate work in the fall or spring semester or in the summer session.

As at all universities, Penn State's staff, facilities, and other resources are limited, so that not all qualified persons can be admitted. The number accepted will vary by program and from semester to semester. In some graduate programs all vacancies will have been filled long before the deadline for submitting applications, so that even outstanding students cannot be accepted.

Degree Admission--Applicants interested in applying to a graduate program at Penn State should obtain information on individual program requirements via the website at www.gradsch.psu.edu/prospective/program.cfm.

Applicants may apply for admission to only one program at a time.

Qualifications--For admission to the Graduate School, an applicant must hold either (1) a bachelor's degree from a U.S. regionally accredited institution or (2) a postsecondary degree that is equivalent to a U.S. baccalaureate degree earned from an officially recognized degree-granting international institution. Ordinarily, an entering student must have completed in a satisfactory manner a minimum of course work in designated areas, the specific courses and amount of work depending upon the intended field of advanced study. Scores on the Graduate Record Examinations (GRE) General Test are required by most programs. Individual program requirements for admission are included under the specific program descriptions. Information about GRE publications can be obtained by calling the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, New Jersey, USA at 1-866-473-4373 or writing to GRE, Educational Testing Service, P.O. Box 6000, Princeton, NJ USA 08541-6000. If you prefer, you may send an e-mail to gre-info@ets.org or order publications through the website at www.gre.org.

Provisional admission may be granted to applicants whose credentials are not complete at the time of application because the baccalaureate degree has not yet been conferred, grades for the current semester are not yet available, etc. Such admission is subject to cancellation if the complete credentials, on arrival, do not meet the requirements for admission. In the interim, certification of any earned credits will be withheld. If admission is canceled for any reason, the student is dropped automatically from the Graduate School. Completion of admission in such cases is dependent upon receipt of the missing credentials. (See Provisional Admission under Classification of Students.)

Admission is granted jointly by the Graduate School and the department or graduate program in which the student plans to study. The establishment of standards by which applicants are admitted is a departmental or program responsibility. Although the Graduate School has no fixed minimum grade-point requirement for admission, an applicant is generally expected to maintain a junior-senior grade-point average of at least 2.50 on Penn State's grading scale of A (4.00) to D (1.00). Individual programs often establish higher grade-point average requirements and use other criteria to judge candidates for admission. In exceptional cases, departments or major programs may also approve admission by reason of special backgrounds, abilities, and interests. Departmental or program requirements are given in the descriptive statements appearing under the graduate programs listed in the latter part of this publication.

A student who has been admitted to a program in which the doctorate is offered may begin working toward that degree but has no official status as a doctoral student and no assurance of acceptance as a doctoral candidate until a candidacy examination administered by the major department or committee has been passed. (See Candidacy Examination under Degree Requirements.)

Deadlines--Applicants should obtain application deadlines by contacting the individual graduate program. Because the admission process is time consuming, applications should be submitted as early as possible.

Pennsylvania Act 34 Clearance--Applicants should note that some programs may require clearance of students participating in internships/practicums in Pennsylvania school districts. Pennsylvania Act 34 of 1985 (Criminal History Record Information) specifies that employees of Pennsylvania public and private schools must undergo background checks. School districts accepting graduate students for internships/practicums increasingly require Act 34 clearance before permitting students to begin their practicums in the district, even though they are not employees. In addition, non-Pennsylvania residents are expected to present evidence of an FBI background information check. Applicants are encouraged to contact the program to which they are applying if they have questions as to this requirement and how it may affect them.

Nondegree Admission--If you do not intend to pursue a graduate degree, but want to take graduate-level courses for personal enrichment, professional development, permanent certification, or to apply for degree status at a later date, you can seek admission as a nondegree graduate student. Information on applying for nondegree graduate status may be obtained via the website at <http://www.gradschool.psu.edu/prospective-students/how-to-apply/new-applicants/enrollment-types/>

Changing from graduate nondegree status to regular status requires a new admission application. No more than 15 graduate credits of course work taken prior to admission to a graduate degree program may be applicable to a graduate program. (See "Nodegree Student" under Classification of Students.) However, admission as a nondegree graduate student neither guarantees nor implies subsequent admission to a degree program. Nondegree students are not eligible to receive fellowships or graduate assistantships and preference for courses is given to degree students. Programs control access to some courses.

Applicants for nondegree admission must have received from a regionally accredited institution a baccalaureate degree under residence and credit conditions substantially equivalent to those required by Penn State.

Minority Students--Minority students are encouraged to apply for admission to any of the programs offered in the Graduate School. Information concerning programs and financial aid can be obtained from the chair of the graduate program, the dean of the college of the student's major interest, or from the Office of Graduate Educational Equity, 304 Kern Building.

International Students--International applicants must hold the equivalent of an American four-year baccalaureate degree. They must submit official or attested university records, with certified translations if the records are not in English. Notarized copies are not sufficient.

English Proficiency--The language of instruction at Penn State is English. All international applicants must take and submit scores for the TOEFL (Test of English as a Foreign Language) or the IELTS (International English Language Testing System), with the exceptions noted below. The minimum acceptable score for the TOEFL is 550 for the paper-based test, or a total score of 80 with a 19 on the speaking section for the Internet-based test (iBT). Applicants with iBT speaking scores between 15 and 18 may be considered for provisional admission, which requires completion of specified remedial English courses ESL 114G (American Oral English for Academic Purposes) and/or ESL 116G (ESL/Composition for Academic Disciplines) and attainment of a grade of B or higher. The minimum acceptable composite score for the IELTS is 6.5. Graduate programs may have more stringent requirements.

International applicants are exempt from the TOEFL/IELTS requirement who have received a baccalaureate or a graduate degree from a college/university/institution in any of the following: Australia, Belize, British Caribbean and British West Indies, Canada (except Quebec), England, Guyana, Republic of Ireland, Liberia, New Zealand, Northern Ireland, Scotland, the United States, and Wales.

Please note that specific graduate programs may require all international applicants to submit a TOEFL or IELTS score, regardless of their academic background and country of origin.

Information about the TOEFL can be obtained by writing to the Educational Testing Service, Box 6155, Princeton, NJ 08541-6155 or visiting its website at www.toefl.org. Local administration at University Park campus of the TOEFL is handled by the IECF. Information about the IELTS can be obtained by contacting IELTS International, 100 East Corson Street, Suite 200, Pasadena, CA 91103 or visiting its website at www.ielts.org.

Undergraduate Students--Any senior with a 3.50 grade-point average may be admitted to 500- or 800-level courses with the consent of the instructor; other seniors with a B average or better may be admitted to graduate courses with the consent of the instructor, the student's academic adviser, and the director of Graduate Enrollment Services. Forms to request permission to take 500- or 800-level courses are available in the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services, 114 Kern Building.

Undergraduate students in The Schreyer Honors College who undertake integrated undergraduate--graduate study (IUG) can pursue concurrent bachelor's and master's degrees. Information on IUG study can be obtained at the office of the dean of The Schreyer Honors College, 10 Schreyer Honors College.

In certain cases undergraduate students may subsequently apply credits they have earned in 400, 500, and 800 series courses toward an advanced degree at Penn State. After admission to the Graduate School, and with the approval of the major field, a maximum of 9 credits relevant to the graduate program of study that were not used to satisfy undergraduate requirements may be applied toward an advanced degree. The time limitation on the completion of a master's degree program applies to these as well as to other credits.

Postdoctoral Fellows, Scholars, and Guests of the University--Postdoctoral Fellow appointments are financed under a Postdoctoral Fellow Program of a granting agency outside the University. A Postdoctoral Scholar is the usual designation for all other postdoctoral appointments that meet the standards enumerated by the National Research Council. Postdoctoral appointments are considered appointments of a temporary nature that are intended to offer an opportunity for continued experience in research or teaching, usually, though not necessarily, under the supervision of a senior mentor.

Individuals holding the highest degree in their fields from Penn State or other accredited colleges and universities are invited to apply to the dean of the Graduate School for guest privileges for purposes of noncredit study. Guests may attend seminars and courses with the privileges of faculty members and, if space and facilities are available, carry on research. Individuals may also be appointed to temporary positions in all University ranks. All guests are expected to affiliate formally or informally with one of the departments, institutes, or other subdivisions of the University engaged in scholarly pursuits.

Policy on Second Doctorates--The Graduate School does not admit applicants to concurrent double Ph.D. degree programs, D.Ed. degree programs, or D.M.A. degree programs, or to concurrent doctoral degree programs in any combination (Ph.D., D.Ed., and/or D.M.A.). In general, the Graduate School discourages the pursuit of a second Ph.D., D.Ed., or D.M.A. degree. However, if an applicant who holds one of these degrees requests admission to a second doctoral degree program (either Ph.D., D.Ed., or D.M.A.), the applicant is asked to give the Graduate School the reason why the second doctorate is necessary (as opposed to taking course work or obtaining a master's degree in the second field or working in a postdoctoral appointment in the second field). The Graduate School then may solicit responses concerning the necessity of the second doctorate from representatives of the field at Penn State or elsewhere. This information is then given to the Dean of the Graduate School for the final decision. If approved, all Graduate School requirements for the second doctorate must be met de novo.

Student Pennsylvania Resident Status--When it appears that an applicant for admission is not a resident of Pennsylvania for tuition purposes, a non-Pennsylvanian classification is assigned. If the student who is thus admitted believes that circumstances do not justify classification as a non-Pennsylvanian, a petition may be addressed to the Fee Assessor, The Pennsylvania State University, 108 Shields Building, University Park, PA 16802 for reclassification. Penn State Harrisburg students may petition the Penn State Harrisburg financial officer.

A copy of the Policy for Determination of Eligibility for Reclassification as a Pennsylvania Resident for Tuition Purposes can be obtained in the office mentioned above or online and should be reviewed before requesting reclassification. Any reclassification resulting from a student's petition shall be effective for tuition purposes as of the date such petition was filed. A student who changes residency from Pennsylvania to another state must promptly give written notice to the University. See also Appendix V to this bulletin.

TRANSFER COURSES

Subject to the limitations given below, a maximum of 10 credits of high-quality graduate work (credits must be equivalent to 400-level or higher at Penn State) transferred from a regionally accredited U.S. institution or a recognized degree-granting international institution may be applied toward the requirements for a graduate degree. However, credits earned to complete a previous degree, whether at Penn State or elsewhere, may not be applied to a graduate degree program at Penn State, except for those students who are approved to double-count credits as part of an approved concurrent or integrated undergraduate-graduate degree or those students approved by the Graduate School to receive a master's degree along the way to a doctorate.

The student should distinguish carefully between the transferability of credit and its applicability in a particular degree program. Approval to apply any transferred credits toward a degree program must be granted by the student's academic adviser, the program head or graduate officer, and the Graduate School. Transferred academic work must have been completed within five years prior to the date of first degree registration at the Graduate School of Penn State, must be of at least B quality (grades of B- are not transferable), and must appear on an official transcript of a regionally accredited U.S. institution or recognized degree-granting international institution.

Pass-fail grades are not transferable to a graduate degree program unless the "Pass" can be substantiated by the former institution as having at least B quality.

Forms for transfer of credit can be obtained from each graduate program.

(See <http://www.gradschool.psu.edu/prospective-students/program-contact-information/> for graduate program contact information.)

Updated: 7/8/14

Classification of Students

A graduate student may be admitted as a degree student, a certificate student, or a nondegree student, depending upon the student's objectives. A student who has held only nondegree status and who later wants to apply for degree status should contact his or her intended program of study. Admission as a nondegree student neither guarantees nor implies subsequent admission to a degree program. Any other change in classification must be arranged through the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services, 114 Kern Building.

Degree Student--A degree student is one who plans to become a candidate for an advanced degree at Penn State and who has been formally admitted for advanced studies in a particular program. The program of study is developed under the guidance of an adviser appointed by the head of the student's major program. A degree student who has passed a candidacy examination is classified as a doctoral candidate.

Provisional Admission--Provisional admission is a temporary classification in which an applicant may remain for a period of either one or two semesters (depending on the provisional type) following admission. If the conditions of provisional admission are not met within that time, the student may be dropped from the program. In addition, all provisional conditions must be met before a student reaches an academic benchmark. Benchmarks include completion of a master's program, the doctoral candidacy, comprehensive, and the final oral examinations. A student will not be permitted to graduate who has not met the conditions of his or her provisional admission.

Nondegree Student--If you do not intend to pursue a graduate degree, but want to take graduate-level courses for personal enrichment, professional development, permanent certification, or to apply for degree status at a later date, you can seek admission as a nondegree graduate student. Information on applying for nondegree graduate status may be obtained via the website at

<http://www.gradschool.psu.edu/prospective-students/how-to-apply/new-applicants/enrollment-types/>

A maximum of 15 graduate credits taken as a nondegree student prior to admission to a graduate degree program may be applied to a graduate program, with departmental approval. The credits must have been earned within five years preceding entry into the degree program. For additional information, see Transfer of Nondegree Graduate Credits, under Transfer Credits. Forms for transfer of nondegree credits may be obtained from the graduate program.

Applicants for nondegree admission must have received from a regionally accredited institution a baccalaureate degree earned under residence and credit conditions substantially equivalent to those required by Penn State.

Certificate Student--A certificate student is one who is engaged in a program of study leading to a certificate or equivalent recognition of accomplishment rather than a graduate degree program at Penn State. Certification students, i.e., candidates for Instructional, Supervisory, Educational Specialist, and Administrative certificates, have the same University privileges and responsibilities as graduate degree students. ( See additional information under Pennsylvania Department of Education Certificate Candidates.)

Undergraduate Student--Such a student is not a graduate student because a baccalaureate degree has not been attained. The student may not register for graduate courses (500 or 800 series) unless he or she is a senior with at least a 3.50 cumulative GPA or with at least a 3.0 GPA and special permission from the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services. Forms to request permission to take 500- or 800-level courses are available in the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services, 114 Kern Building.

CREDIT BY EXAMINATION

Examinations to establish credit for work done in absentia or without formal class work may be used to remove undergraduate deficiencies, but not to earn credits toward an advanced degree. Arrangements are made by the student directly with the major department head or program chair.

Student Aid

THE UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

The University Libraries constitute a major resource for students and researchers in all fields of study. The Libraries are ranked among the top ten research libraries in North America by the Association of Research Libraries and contain more than 53 million volumes, 6.9 million microforms, 88,668 serial subscriptions, plus more than 536 databases and 45,906 online full-text journals, and 100,000 e-books.

The University Libraries include a central facility and five other libraries at University Park campus, plus libraries at 23 Penn State locations throughout the state, including the Dickinson School of Law and the Milton S. Hershey Center and the Penn State affiliated Pennsylvania College of Technology. At University Park, the Arts and Humanities, Business, Education and Behavioral Sciences, Gateway Commons, Social Sciences, Maps, Life Sciences, Special Collections, and News and Microforms libraries are maintained in Pattee Library and Paterno Library. Other Libraries at University Park include the Architecture and Landscape Architecture, Earth and Mineral Sciences, Engineering, Law, and Physical and Mathematical Sciences libraries.

In addition Pattee Library houses Course Reserves Services, the Extended Hours Study Area, (now offering 24-hour service), and Library Services for Persons with Disabilities. The Special Collections Library in Paterno Library includes Historical Collections and Labor Archives, Rare Books and Manuscripts, and the Penn State University Archives. Additional library services include assigned carrels, photocopiers, a student lounge with vending machines, change machines, and MacKinnon's Cafe.

Among special collections of national importance are those on Arnold Bennett, Kenneth Burke, Jean Giraudoux, John O'Hara, Vance Packard, Joseph Priestley, Conrad Richter; the Allison-Shelley collection of Anglo-Americana-Germanica; and materials on Utopian literature and on Australia. The Historical Collections and Labor Archives contain a wide variety of documentary sources, including the papers of Pennsylvania leaders and businesses and records of labor unions. The most notable of these documents are those of Richard Schweiker, William Scranton, the United Steelworkers of America, and the United Mine Workers of America. The Penn State University Archives house an extensive collection of materials about the University and the surrounding community.

Faculty members may recommend books and other library material purchases by contacting a subject specialist at www.libraries.psu.edu/psul/cataloging/services\_policies/specialists.html.

. Faculty at locations other than University Park can also contact their head librarian.

Access to holdings is obtained through The CAT, a computerized catalog, part of the Library Information Access System (LIAS), available on the Web at www.libraries.psu.edu

. LIAS is a dynamic, integrated information system that provides electronic access to a great variety of materials in many subject areas.

The Libraries maintain a comprehensive program of general and specialized reference and instructional services. The Libraries' faculty teach credit courses as part of the Library Studies Program and offer a variety of topical seminars. Introductory sessions, offered by Library Learning Services, are scheduled on a regular basis to familiarize faculty, students, and other library users with LIAS. Class sessions designed for specific courses can be arranged in the library to help students learn how to find, use, and evaluate relevant books, articles, Web sites, and other information resources. Assistance is available to help design assignments that use library resources to enhance student research skills and critical thinking. Library instruction rooms (hands-on labs or traditional classrooms) can be reserved for on-site instruction in the use of library resources. For information, go to:

www.libraries.psu.edu/psul/lis.html

Penn State holds membership in the Association of Research Libraries, the Consortium for Institutional Cooperation, and the Online Computer Library Center (OCLC). Participation in these organizations provides faculty and students with access to the collections of more than 2,500 libraries across the United States and internationally, including major research libraries. It is the largest research library in Pennsylvania and one of four resource libraries that provide service and collections to all other libraries and citizens of the Commonwealth.

The publication Guide to the University Libraries offers additional information on services and programs and is available at Libraries service desks and by calling 814-863-4240. More information is also available at www.libraries.psu.edu/psul/pram/publications.html

. An Open House is held each fall semester.

Media and Technology Support Services (MediaTech),

www.libraries.psu.edu/mtss/

, a division of the University Libraries, has a collection of more than 24,000 films and videotapes and more than 5,000 pieces of technology and audio-visual equipment available to faculty, staff, and students. Titles in the Media Tech collection are listed in The CAT, the Libraries' online catalog and in the MediaTech database at

<http://extranet.libraries.psu.edu/mtss/media/searchMedianet.html>

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY SERVICES

Information Technology Services (ITS) ensures that faculty, students, and staff have the information technology tools and infrastructure necessary to carry out the University's mission. ITS is working to achieve five broad goals: help faculty improve the way education is delivered; provide students with resources to enrich their educational experience; create and sustain an environment that enables leading-edge research; help to improve productivity; and establish the information technology infrastructure necessary to maintain Penn State's preeminence in integrating high-quality programs in teaching, research, and outreach. For additional information, see its.psu.edu on the Web.

SPECIALIZED COMPUTING FACILITIES

Penn State also provides distributed computing and information systems. Many academic computing facilities exist to support the specialized research and instructional requirements of the colleges and the intercollege research programs. Some of these facilities are described below.

Colleges

College of Arts and Architecture

The School of Architecture and Landscape Architecture operates dedicated student computer labs and has integrated desktop computers into the studio environment. Students have access to high-performance networks via either wired or wireless connections. The school's computer labs, including the Stuckeman Center for Design Computing, are primarily used for teaching and research in such areas as computer graphics, computer-assisted drawing, design, GIS, and digital imaging, as well as exploration into computer visualization, virtual reality, and digital fabrication. A wide variety of available input and output equipment, such as large-format printers, color printers, scanners, a CNC laser cutter, site survey, and video imaging and capturing equipment, provides faculty and students with opportunities to explore and master a variety of technologies and presentation techniques.

The Immersive Environments Lab (IEL) is a joint venture between Penn State's Information Technology Services (ITS) and the School of Architecture and Landscape Architecture (SALA). The IEL is a stereo visualization system consisting of a three-screen panorama display and a cluster of graphics workstations. Students have the capability of displaying a range of 2D and 3D presentations or they may launch 3D to a full three-screen stereo panorama for a group walk-through. Using virtual reality to visualize interior and exterior spaces allows students to follow the design process from conception to construction to completion.

The School of Music provides students and faculty in all disciplines within the school with a Macintosh-based electronic music laboratory and two computerized music rooms. These facilities afford faculty and students opportunities to create, analyze, and perform music as well as develop innovative music teaching materials.

The School of Theatre maintains lab facilities to support its technical theatre program, including set design, lighting, sound, and costume design. Interaction with common and professional applications affords students the opportunity to gain familiarity and experience with tools being used in the field. In addition, computers are regularly used in performance to control lighting and sound systems and to facilitate such complex tasks as moving scenery.

The School of Visual Arts computer facilities are customized for the advanced technological needs of students and faculty in the School of Visual Arts and the Department of Integrative Arts. Located in 302, 304, and 401 Patterson Building and maintained by Information Technology Services (ITS), the Patterson computer laboratories are specialized for design, animation, and high-end multimedia production. Within close proximity, the Graphic Design computer laboratory, 208 Visual Arts Building, is designed to meet the specific needs of students enrolled in the Graphic Design program. The Digital Photography computer laboratory, customized for students enrolled in the Photography program, is located in 209 Visual Arts Building. All five labs are Macintosh environments and are used as both teaching and study facilities. Most labs are open twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week.

College of Earth and Mineral Sciences

The College of Earth and Mineral Sciences has installed a high-speed communications network that provides computer-to-computer communications within the college, as well as with external networks and computers via University facilities. Wireless access to this network is provided throughout the college. Computing facilities are distributed throughout the departments and institutes of the college, and include extensive local PC, UNIX/LINUX, and Macintosh computer laboratories accessible to undergraduate and graduate students. Many graduate students have a PC or UNIX computer supplied to their desktop. In addition to these distributed facilities, high-performance computing is available on high-end Linux clusters operated by the ITS GeARS group in concert with the college's departments and institutes.

College of Education

In the College of Education, the Education Technology Center, located in 201 Chambers Building, provides technical support services, multimedia and graphic design services, Web design and development services, and computer application training for College of Education faculty and staff. The Education Technology Center also maintains the Education Technology Demonstration Classroom and video conferencing services. The Demonstration Classroom is used by College of Education faculty for implementing technology into teaching and learning for undergraduate and graduate College of Education courses. It also provides a computer facility equipped to instruct College of Education students how to use technology in their teaching and learning experiences.

The IBM Personal Computer Lab, located in 202 Chambers Building and the Macintosh Computer Lab located in 205 Chambers provide microcomputer access to the University community. Thirty networked IBM and twenty-eight Macintosh computers are available for student and faculty use. (The labs are restricted during certain hours; check schedule outside each room.)

College of Engineering

The College of Engineering has a number of general and special purpose computational resources and services to support the College's educational and research endeavors. Each department maintains multiple laboratories that include various servers and workstations. These laboratories employ a number of Sun, PC, and Macintosh workstations running under the latest Sun, Microsoft, LINUX, or UNIX operating system. In addition to these general purpose facilities, several departments have faculty who maintain High-Performance Parallel Computing facilities with multiprocessor computing nodes for research initiatives. These facilities typically use PC-based systems running LINUX or Macintosh OSX servers running Open BSD in Beowulf clustering configurations. The University's Information Technology Services also maintains a multinode High-Performance Parallel Computing facility for faculty and graduate student research. The College of Engineering also operates and maintains a multimode High-Performance Computing cluster to support undergraduate and graduate education. The College system is available during non-peak usage times to support graduate research.

The Department of Computer Science and Engineering at Penn State uses a network of Solaris, Linux, OS X, and Windows workstations and servers to support academic computing needs. Instruction is supported by pairs of Sun V240 and V880 servers. These servers act as application, Web, e-mail, and license servers for over 400 workstations in labs, graduate student offices, and faculty offices. Funded research efforts utilize any one of the departments nine High Performance Computing Clusters, totaling nearly 400 multi-processor compute nodes sharing IBA, DolpinNet, Myrinet, and GigE interconnection. Researchers currently share approximately 15TB of BlueArc NAS storage. Additionally, the department is constructing a cognition and perception lab with cutting edge computer vision technology. NSF CISE/Instrumentation, Infrastructure, and IGERT grants have funded much of CSE's research equipment. Computing resources are connected via a fail-safe pair of 3Com 7700 Switching Routers. The routers provide GigE service to all backbone-connected devices, including all edge switching devices. CSE's GigE connection to the campus backbone (including I and I2) is hosted with a resilient pair of interfaces through an HSRP enabled firewall. All of this equipment is housed in the Information Sciences and Technology building, Penn State's new technology showcase building.

The Institute for Computational Science is a University-wide initiative conceived and chaired by a faculty member in the College of Engineering. The institute addresses the need for resources and computing power required for fields such as computational fluid dynamics, computational chemistry, computational meteorology, computational physics, artificial intelligence, computational materials science, business computing, etc. Annual conferences focus on collaboration among researchers in the aforementioned computation intensive programs.

Electronic and Computer Services (ECS) within the College of Engineering provides faculty and graduate students with engineering expertise and support in the areas of hardware and software system design, prototyping, and complete systems integration. ECS resources include high-performance workstations and design tools (ViewLogic, H-Spice, Cadence, LabView, AutoCAD, etc.). Also available are tools for embedded system development. Prototyping facilities consist of Xilinx and Altera systems for FPGA design. Distributed access to College, departmental, and ECS resources is through the College's maintained high-speed secure data network. ECS maintains the College's High-Performance computing cluster and network throughout 26 buildings; ECS also maintains and operates core College e-mail, Web and departmental servers, providing nightly backup services to these critical systems. Virtual Private Networking and secure wireless services throughout the College enables mobile computing and data access from anywhere Internet connectivity is available.

College of Health and Human Development

The Department of Kinesiology maintains several specialized computer systems dedicated to automated motion analyses, musculoskeletal modeling, medical imaging, physiological testing, and the generation of virtual reality environments for experimental purposes.

Eberly College of Science

Within the Eberly College of Science, each department has an array of computer facilities.

- The Department of Astronomy and Astrophysics computing resources include a large and ever-expanding network of workstations and personal computers. The current census includes 50 Sun workstations, 12 Power Macs, and 70 PCs. Many of the workstations are configured for maximum processing power so that data sets from various ground- and space-based observing platforms from around the world can be intensively analyzed by faculty and graduate students. The Department has a 100-MB intranet with a fiber optic 100-MB connection to the University backbone. Ten terabytes of online disk space serves data to Department research teams.
- The Department of Biochemistry and Molecular Biology maintains a 100-Mbps Ethernet with ~500 IP addresses currently in use. Most of these serve desktop computers in individual research groups. Twelve desktop computers are maintained in one room for general or instructional use, and eight workstations are dedicated to special equipment for phosphorimaging, laser densitometry, analytical ultracentrifugation, surface plasmon resonance measurements, and X-ray crystallography. Laptops and projectors also are available for general use.
- The Department of Biology maintains two 100-MB fiber backbones that support nearly 500 PC and Macintosh machines. Most of these computers are used to run research machinery and for individual research label workstations. The department also houses thirteen servers, including a state-of-the-art firewall, two domain controllers, automated Windows patch management, automated antivirus system management, and an advanced Web application cluster. Licensed software within the department includes a wide array of Microsoft and Macintosh products.
- The Department of Chemistry provides network access for approximately 1,024 nodes comprising numerous PCs, workstations, and servers of varying operation systems, supported by 10/100/1000 MB Fast Ethernet. Chemistry also Penn State Wireless 2.0 access, VPN service and Web space for courses and research as well as computer an instrumentation repair services for Penn State-funded equipment. Several individual research groups within Chemistry boast their own PC clusters. Some of the computer-intensive research groups participate in the shared resources of the Graduate Educational and Research Services (GEaRs) and the Institute for High-Performance Computing Applications.
- The Department of Mathematics maintains a high-speed switched network of UNIX-based workstations and servers for use by faculty, students, and staff. Most workstations are for use by individuals or small groups. A lab is maintained for use by undergraduates, graduates, faculty, and visitors. Supported operating systems are Solaris and OSX. Supported software includes Mathematica, Matlab, TeX, and LaTeX. Supported programming languages include C, C++, Java, Fortran, and Perl. Some research groups maintain their own computing equipment including a Beowulf cluster and computers used to control high-speed cameras.

- The Department of Physics maintains a high-speed switched network that provides several connections to each office and supports a wide variety of computing environments. In addition to this wired networking, the department provides wireless internet access in several areas. Many research groups have their own computing systems, which range from simple PCs to Beowulf clusters. At the departmental level, a group of UNIX and MAC servers supports mail, Web, printing, backup, etc. All department members are entitled to accounts on general access Windows XP, Linux, and Sun system with a variety of appropriate software. A computer lab, available to all department members, has workstations, printers, and scanners. The department hosts a Reconfigurable Advance Visualization Environment (RAVE) for stereoscopic visualization of simulation results.
- The Department of Statistics maintains computer systems and laboratories to provide facilities for both research and instruction. Equipment includes thirty Sun UNIX workstations, sixty PCs (operating Windows and LINUX), high-quality laser printers, color printers, a color scanner, and video-capture facilities. Faculty and students have computers in their offices. Software packages include BMDP, MINITAB, SAS, Splus, R, ArcInfo, Mathematica, FORTRAN, C, Java, LaTeX, and TeX. The department has two full-time system administrators to maintain a high-quality computer infrastructure.

Many colleges operate computing laboratories that provide students and faculty with microcomputing capabilities and/or batch and interactive access to the University's principal computers through Information Technology Services (ITS).

Interdisciplinary—The Applied Research Laboratory (ARL) uses more than 2,000 computers in multiple networks of Microsoft Windows, LINUX, Solaris, and VAX workstations, with software supporting data acquisition and processing, process control, modeling and simulation, visualization, data fusion, interactive problem solving, and business applications. MATLAB is used extensively. A synthetic environment lab is available for 3-D visualization.

High-performance computer resources include multiple Linux clusters and grids, and access to U.S. government HPC resources. Mechanical and printed circuit CAD software is used for design, and computer-aided manufacturing software is used extensively to run the shop's multi-axis CNC machines. Student access is dependant upon their relationship with ARL.

The Materials Research Institute (MRI, at

www.mri.psu.edu

), together with more than a dozen academic departments/units, offers students access to professionally staffed materials processing, characterization, and computer simulation facilities. MRI enables new opportunities for multidisciplinary education and research within the materials-related disciplines.

Materials Simulation Center (MSC)

A group of faculty and professional staff develop state-of-the-art atomic-scale materials modeling for design of high-performance alloys, evaluation of precursors for epitaxial growth, calculation of electronic and structural properties of nanoscale materials, and simulations for materials processing.

Center for Computational Materials Design (CCMD)

An NSF I/UCRC Center based on needs identified by CCMD members, which initially includes 13 organizations representing both large and small businesses and DOE and DOD laboratories. Faculty from Penn State and Georgia Tech will carry out short and long term research in innovative materials design. The proposed research will be at the interface of industrial relevance and scientific knowledge and will include interdisciplinary groups of materials science and engineering faculty and graduate students, as well as engineering systems design faculty, computer scientists, and applied mathematicians.

Institute for Computational Science

Computational science refers to the use of computers, networks, storage devices, software, and algorithms to solve problems, do simulations, build things, or create new knowledge.

The Penn State Institutes of Energy and the Environment (PSIE) at the Land and Water Research Building provide computing and network infrastructure to support the research of affiliated faculty, researchers, and graduate students. Resources include a firewalled local network as well as web servers and infrastructure for public presentation of research, applications, and data. Additionally, PSIE maintains a 25-person capacity videoconferencing facility for faculty and research use.

Academic Information and Procedures

It is each student's responsibility to know or seek out as needed the regulations and pertinent procedures of Graduate Council and the Graduate School as set forth in the Graduate Degree Programs Bulletin and in the Thesis/Dissertation Guide, published by the Office of Theses and Dissertations, and to meet the standards and requirements expressed by these regulations. Graduate students are encouraged to contact the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services, 114 Kern Graduate Building (814-865-1795), for guidance if they have any questions, uncertainties, or difficulties concerning any procedure or regulation of Graduate Council, the Graduate School, or the University as it may affect them.

In addition, all programs should have a graduate handbook, which provides students with information on specific program requirements and procedures from admission to degree completion (i.e., arrangement of courses in accordance with degree requirements, including required courses and typical elective courses; appointment of advisers and/or committees; responsibilities of the student, adviser, and committee; scheduling of exams; assistantship duties; etc.).

UNSATISFACTORY SCHOLARSHIP

A graduate student who fails to maintain satisfactory scholarship or to make acceptable progress in a degree program may be dropped from the University. One or more failing grades or a cumulative grade-point average below 3.00 for any semester or session or combination of semesters and/or sessions may be considered as evidence of failure to maintain satisfactory scholarship. Action may be initiated by the department or committee in charge of the graduate major or by the chair of the student's doctoral committee. The procedures to be followed in such action are found in Appendix III in this bulletin.

CONFIDENTIALITY OF STUDENTS' RECORDS

The Pennsylvania State University collects and retains data and information about students for designated periods of time for the express purpose of facilitating the students' educational development. The University recognizes the privacy rights of individuals in exerting control over what information about themselves may be disclosed and, at the same time, attempts to balance that right with the institution's need for information relevant to the fulfillment of its educational missions.

The University further recognizes its obligation to inform the students of their rights under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1978 (FERPA); to inform students of the existence and location of records as well as to define the purposes for which such information is obtained; to provide security for such material; to permit students access to, disclosure of, and challenge to this information as here- in described; and to discontinue such information when compelling reasons for its retention no longer exist.

Student Record Policy--No information from records, files and data directly related to a student shall be disclosed by any means (including telephone) to individuals or agencies outside the University without the written consent of the student, except pursuant to lawful subpoena or court order, or in the case of specifically designated educational and governmental officials as required by FERPA. Information contained in such records may be shared within the University by University officials with "legitimate educational interest" in such information.

A more complete description of the University's policy on confidentiality of student records, including educational records and alumni records; disclosures to students, third parties, agencies, and parents of dependent students; and challenges to entries, is contained in Policies and Rules, which is available at departmental and deans' offices.

Programs and Advanced Degrees

PROGRAMS

Graduate Major Program--A student's major program is the field of primary interest and the one in which the greater portion of graduate work is taken. Programs are designed to prepare students to assume positions of informed and responsible authority in their fields and to contribute creatively to them. They promote not only specialization, but also breadth of scholarship, the ability to study and think independently, and familiarity with the principal techniques and important literature in the field. The research undertaken by the candidate should deal with a problem that can yield a significant contribution to knowledge.

In general, departments of the University are identified with specific major programs. Thus, Aerospace Engineering is a graduate major program that is offered by the Department of Aerospace Engineering. In some cases, a single department offers work in more than one degree program. Occasionally, two or more departments within a college or across colleges collaborate in offering an interdisciplinary program.

Intercollege Graduate Degree Programs--When faculty members from departments in two or more colleges collaborate in offering a graduate major, the program is designated as an intercollege graduate degree program. A committee of graduate faculty members approved by the Graduate School is responsible for administering the program under a program chair. The University currently offers more than a dozen such programs, primarily at the doctoral level.

ADVANCED DEGREES OFFERED

The degrees of Doctor of Philosophy, Doctor of Education, and Doctor of Musical Arts are conferred by the University. The Ph.D. places a strong emphasis on research. The D.Ed. emphasizes professional competence in a field of education. The D.M.A. recognizes professional-level performance and scholarly knowledge of the instrument and the discipline of music. All require high attainment and productive scholarship.

The Master of Arts (M.A.) and the Master of Science (M.S.) degrees are academic in nature, the programs placing emphasis on basic knowledge and research. Various professional master's degrees also are conferred.

Graduate degree programs are offered at five campuses of the University: University Park (State College); Penn State Erie, The Behrend College (Erie); Penn State Harrisburg (Harrisburg); the Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center (Hershey); and Penn State Great Valley School of Graduate Professional Studies (Malvern). Some graduate programs also are offered online through Penn State's World Campus at www.worldcampus.psu.edu.

CHANGE OF DEGREE OR PROGRAM

A graduate student who has been admitted for work in one major program but who wants to transfer to another should complete a "Resume Study/Change of Degree or Major" form and submit the request to the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services. The student's credentials will be reviewed and the proposed new graduate program head or committee chair consulted. If the change is approved but the student is inadequately prepared for the new major, the student may be required to make up certain deficiencies.

A graduate student admitted for either an academic/research degree (M.A., M.S., or Ph.D.) or a professional degree who wants to change from one type of degree program to another must complete a "Resume Study/Change of Degree or Major" form and submit the request to the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services. Similarly, a student who has earned a master's degree at Penn State but who wants to earn a doctoral degree in a different field must complete a "Resume Study/Change of Degree or Major" form and submit the request to the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services, 114 Kern Graduate Building. A student may be required to make up certain deficiencies if inadequately prepared for the new program.

CONCURRENT GRADUATE DEGREE PROGRAMS

In general, graduate students are best advised to focus on one degree objective at a time. However, a candidate for a master's degree in one major field who wishes to begin work for either a master's or a doctoral degree in a second field; or a candidate for a doctoral degree who wishes to begin work on a master's degree in a second field while concurrently completing the doctoral program can petition to do so (approval will not be granted for any combination of concurrent doctorates, including the Ph.D., D.Ed., or D.M.A. degrees). The department or program heads of both majors and the director of Graduate Enrollment Services must approve any such plan. Guidelines for preparation of a proposal for concurrent graduate degrees have been established by Graduate Council. The guidelines and form are available on the Graduate School website at:

<http://www.gradschool.psu.edu/forms-and-documents/ges-owned-forms-and-documents/concurrentgraduatedegreeprogramsplanofstudy/>.

DUAL-TITLE GRADUATE DEGREE PROGRAMS

Students may apply for dual-title degrees in one of the dual-title graduate degree programs approved by Graduate Council. Students wishing to follow this course of action must already be enrolled in an existing graduate program; it is this primary program in which the greater portion of the work will be conducted. The primary program will be supplemented by a secondary program in which substantial work is carried out under the supervision of a faculty adviser from the secondary program, and in which a thesis or culminating/capstone experience integrating both fields is completed. Guidelines and information are available from the Dean of the Graduate School.

INTEGRATED UNDERGRADUATE-GRADUATE (IUG) DEGREE PROGRAMS

Programmatic Integrated Undergraduate-Graduate Degree Programs--Graduate Council-approved Integrated Undergraduate-Graduate (IUG) degree programs are available. These programs allow students to work on a baccalaureate and a master's degree at the same time and are intended for exceptional students who can perform their academic studies at an accelerated pace and take on the challenges of graduate courses and research while still enrolled as undergraduates. Typically, up to 12 of the credits required for the master's degree may be applied to both degrees (excluding the graduate thesis or other graduate culminating/capstone experience, including any associated credits and/or deliverables, which may not be double-counted toward any other degree; if the thesis or culminating/capstone experience is recognized as meeting requirements for the undergraduate degree, it will not be recognized and cannot be used to meet requirements for the graduate degree), and the total time for completing both degrees is less than if the degrees were earned separately. These programs include those within a single department and those that are interdepartmental or intercollege programs. Guidelines and information are available at: <http://www.gradschool.psu.edu/faculty-and-staff/faculty/iugs>.

Schreyer Honors College Integrated Undergraduate-Graduate Degree Programs--The Graduate School, by special exception from the Dean of the Graduate School, offers Schreyer Scholars the opportunity to integrate any existing Penn State baccalaureate degree program with any existing Penn State master's degree program in a continuous program of study culminating in both a baccalaureate and a master's degree.

A Schreyer Scholar who is granted IUG status will have dual enrollment in an undergraduate program and in a master's program. Some credits earned as an undergraduate may be applied to both degree programs; however, the graduate thesis or other graduate culminating/capstone experience (including associated credits and/or deliverables) may not be double-counted toward any other degree. If the thesis or culminating/capstone experience is recognized as meeting requirements for the undergraduate degree, it will not be recognized and cannot be used to meet requirements for the graduate degree. Schreyer Scholars must adhere to the Graduate Council guidelines for establishing IUG programs that may be found at <http://www.gradschool.psu.edu/faculty-and-staff/faculty/iugs> when constructing their individual IUG programs, including those related to timing of admission. In addition, the Schreyer Honors College has established procedures for Schreyer Scholars who wish to explore this opportunity. See: <https://www.shc.psu.edu/academic/resources/iug.cfm>.

Registration

A graduate student who is in residence at the University is expected to be properly registered. In residence means that the student (whether full- or part-time, whether commuting to campus or other instructional site or living nearby or on campus) is pursuing graduate credits and/or an advanced degree by (a) attending classes or seminars for credit or audit; (b) doing a thesis, term project, independent study, or similar research or scholarly work in a University laboratory or other research facility; (c) consulting in person or by other means of communication with one or more faculty members on scholarly matters, research projects, or dissertation; (d) using the library, Computation Center, or other University information resources; or (e) using other University facilities provided for graduate study.

The responsibility for being properly registered rests first with the student and secondarily with the student's adviser if the student has one (nondegree students may not). A student may register for course work or research or a combination of the two. In the case of research the number of credits shall be determined by the amount of time devoted to the investigation, with 1 credit representing approximately the equivalent of one week of full-time work. In the later stages of the program, the situation will determine the requirements for the student's registration. (See Registration Near the Completion of a Program.)

International Students--Because international students on an F1 or J1 visa are required by the Department of Homeland Security regulation to be in residence, all international students need to be registered for full-time status (fall and spring semester), unless an exception to full-time enrollment has been approved by the University Office of Global Programs Directorate of International Student Advising (DISA). Students who fail to register may jeopardize their status.

Advisers--Advising is an important factor in enhancing the quality of a student's program. To assist the student in planning a coherent program and meeting all degree requirements, the head of the major department or program chair will designate a member of the faculty to serve as adviser. It is the student's responsibility to secure an adviser from the department or program and to seek a conference before each registration.

Time of Registration--Registration days are indicated in the calendar at the beginning of this bulletin. A student is expected to complete registration during the officially designated period and to attend the first meeting of all classes. If this is impossible because of some emergency or unusual circumstance, the student may be granted permission by the instructor to miss a few class meetings, it being understood that work missed will be made up subsequently. Under these conditions permission may be granted through the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services for the student to register late. In general, a student who receives permission to register late will be required to reduce the course load in proportion to the length of absence.

A student who fails to complete the process of registration within the officially designated registration period will be liable for the late registration charge, regardless of when the student begins attending classes.

Continuity of Registration--A student who is a degree candidate at any of the five graduate campuses of the University and who registers there without interruption for each fall and spring semester is considered to have maintained a normal continuity of registration. A student who has been admitted as a "summers only" D.Ed. candidate (see D.Ed. Residence Requirements) can maintain continuity by registering each summer for a six-week summer session.

Anyone who has interrupted such a normal sequence and now plans to return and register for course work is required to submit a request to the appropriate campus graduate admissions office using the form found at the corresponding links below:

---Penn State Great Valley School of Professional Studies

---Penn State Harrisburg

---All other campuses

The policy may be summarized for any specific semester or session as follows:

- Summer Session--Resume Study/Change of Degree or Major form required unless the student was registered for the preceding spring semester or the preceding summer session (if "summers only" student).
- Fall Semester--Resume Study/Change of Degree or Major form required unless the student was registered for the preceding summer session or the preceding spring semester.
- Spring Semester--Resume Study/Change of Degree or Major form required unless the student was registered for the preceding fall semester.

Withdrawal--The dropping of all academic work for which a student is registered in any semester constitutes withdrawal from the University, and changes the student's status to nondegree. A "Resume Study/Change of Degree or Major" form must then be submitted and approved if the student wants to enroll for further work toward a degree.

Procedure--For each registration, it is expected that the student, in consultation with the adviser, will prepare a schedule of courses and research designed to fit individual needs and meeting the pertinent credit limits. The registration process is completed in the manner specified for all students at the University.

Under certain conditions credit may be earned for work done away from the campus. A student contemplating such work should first consult with his or her adviser and then inquire at the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services about the procedures and conditions. The student must assume responsibility for the registration process, by accessing the Registrar's Web site at www.registrar.psu.edu

. Registration must be completed before the close of central registration at University Park campus.

A student must register for courses audited as well as those taken for credit.

REGISTRATION NEAR THE COMPLETION OF A PROGRAM

A candidate for the Ph.D. degree is required to register continuously for each semester from the time the comprehensive examination is passed and the two-semester residence requirement is met until the thesis is accepted by the doctoral committee, regardless of whether work is being done on the thesis during this interval. (See Registration and Continuous Registration.)

Although there is no general continuous registration requirement for D.Ed. degree candidates and master's students, individual programs may require it. It should be noted, moreover, that (a) proper registration (see Registration) is expected of all graduate students; (b) graduate assistants must carry the prescribed credit loads (see Credit Loads and Academic Status); and (c) because of visa considerations, international students typically will register every semester, no matter what their degree objectives.

A master's candidate is not required to register for the final semester in order to graduate or in order to make minor revisions to the thesis and/or to take a final examination for the degree, unless required to do so by the program.

Graduate Credits

Typically, a candidate for an advanced degree is required to earn a certain minimum number of credits at Penn State. Consequently, there is a limit to the number of credits that may be earned at another approved institution to meet the minimum requirements of the degree. Moreover, the department or committee in charge of a major program may require a student to do more of the work at the University than specified by the limitations set by the Graduate Faculty.

Full-time participation in graduate study involves a wide range of activities. The nature of these activities varies because of the diversity of programs throughout the University. The graduate student is responsible for ascertaining, through the adviser and/or program office, the range of total activity of his or her individual program that constitutes normal progress toward the degree.

A self-supported or fellowship student who is registered for at least 9 credits is considered to be engaged in full-time academic work for that semester. If such a student wishes to register for more than 15 credits, an exception to the normal maximum load must be granted through petition (with adviser's approval) to the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services.

Credit limits and full-time status for assistants and University employees are described under Credit Loads and Academic Status.

Graduate courses carry numbers from 500 to 699 and 800 to 899.

--A 500-level graduate course builds on advanced undergraduate and/or graduate courses, dealing with the frontiers of knowledge in the field. It is grounded in theories, hypotheses, and methodologies as expounded in current and/or primary literature sources. Synthesis of knowledge and independent analytical work by the student must be demonstrated. Significant and regular instructor-initiated interaction between students and the instructor(s) should occur in all 500-level courses, whether delivered in residence or at a distance, including online.

--An 800-level graduate course pertains to the most recently established knowledge and methodologies in a field of study, as applied to practice. It emphasizes analytical thinking and application of knowledge by the student in the context of providing pragmatic solutions for professionals. Significant and regular instructor-initiated interaction between students and the instructor(s) should occur in all 800-level courses, whether delivered in residence or at a distance, including online.

Advanced undergraduate courses numbered between 400 and 499 may be used to meet some graduate degree requirements when taken by graduate students. Courses below the 400 level may not. Language courses used to meet foreign language requirements are exceptions, as are the ESL courses for international students.

No student is permitted to count audited credits toward the minimum credit load for full-time or part-time status.

Course-Numbering System--Courses in the series 1–399 are not listed in this bulletin because they are strictly undergraduate courses and yield no graduate credit. A graduate student may register for or audit these courses in order to make up deficiencies or to fill in gaps in previous education but not to meet requirements for an advanced degree.

Courses in the series 400–499 are for upperclass students with at least a junior standing and for graduate students. Only a limited number of credits earned in these courses may be counted toward the requirements for an advanced degree. Detailed regulations concerning the restrictions are given under the specific requirements for the various master's degrees.

Courses in the series 500–599 and 800–899 are restricted to students registered in the Graduate School, senior undergraduate students with an average of at least 3.50, and certain other students with averages of at least 3.00 who have been granted special permission to enroll through the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services. (See the introduction to Graduate Programs, Faculty, and Courses for a more detailed description of these courses.)

The 600 series consists of specified common course numbers restricted to students enrolled in degree programs in the Graduate School having specific foci. The numbers 600 (on campus) and 610 (off campus) are available for credit in thesis research in all graduate major programs. The numbers 601 and 611 do not denote conventional courses but are used for noncredit special registration for thesis preparation by a Ph.D. candidate. (Note that 596 course numbers may not be used for thesis research work.) Registration under these numbers will maintain status as a full-time (601) or part-time (611) student during the interval that begins at the time the student passes the comprehensive examination and meets the two-semester residence requirement and ends at the time the doctoral committee accepts the thesis. The student may register for 601 if engaged full-time in the preparation of a thesis or for 611 if engaged only part-time in thesis preparation. Candidates for the Ph.D. degree do not receive grades for noncredit registrations (601 and 611). [See also Ph.D.—Additional Specific Requirements and the common course descriptions in the introduction to Graduate Programs, Faculty, and Courses.]

Schedule of Courses--The most current information on courses that will be offered in any specific semester is at <http://schedule.psu.edu>. It gives the number of the class, the hours at which the class will meet, the location of the class, and in some cases the instructor's name.

Visiting and Auditing Classes--A graduate student registered for a given semester who wants to attend classes without receiving credit may secure permission either to visit or to audit courses during that semester.

As a visitor, a student may attend classes with the approval of the instructor but may not claim the usual privileges of class membership, such as participating in discussion, doing practicum work, or taking examinations. Registration is not required for the privilege of visiting, and no record appears on the student's transcript.

As an auditor, a student may participate in class discussion, do practicum work, take examinations, and generally enjoy the privileges of a class member. Registration procedures and fee payment are the same as for taking the course for credit. Attendance is required. No credit is given, either on completion of the course or at a later time; however, the number of credits assigned to the course appears on the grade report and on the student's transcript. Thus, when a student receives an audit grade, the number of credits audited is shown. The symbol AU shall be used if attendance has been regular, the symbol W if attendance has been unsatisfactory.

A graduate assistant or Fellow who is required to register for a certain minimum number of credits is not permitted to count audited course credits toward the minimum credits needed. Undergraduate courses taken to meet foreign language or English requirements do count in the total credit load. The student may register for credit or audit beyond the required minimum but may not exceed the normal maximum without special permission.

Credit Loads and Academic Status

Graduate Assistants--Graduate assistants must be enrolled at Penn State as graduate students. More specifically, since assistantships are provided as aids to completion of advanced degrees, assistants must be degree-seeking and enrolled in residence for credit loads each semester that fall within the limits indicated in the table below. Maximum limits on permissible credit loads are indicated in order to assure that the student can give appropriate attention both to academic progress and assistantship responsibilities. These considerations give rise to the table of permissible credit loads below.

Level of Assistantship	Credits Per Semester		Credits per 6-Week Summer Session
	Minimum	Maximum	Minimum	Maximum
Quarter-time	9	14	5	7
Half-time	9	12	4	6
Three-quarter-time	6	8	3	4

*Credits taken during the Maymester and over both six-week summer sessions must total a minimum of 9 (for 1/4- and 1/2-time assistantships) or 6 (for 3/4-time assistantships) and cannot exceed a maximum of 8 (for 3/4-time assistantships), 12 (for 1/2-time assistantships), or 14 (for 1/4-time assistantships).

To provide for some flexibility, moderate exceptions to the specified limits may be made in particular cases. The credit limits specified above may only be increased or decreased in exceptional cases for a specific semester or summer session by permission of the assistantship supervisor, the student's academic adviser, and the dean of the Graduate School (requests should be submitted for the dean's approval via the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services). The Graduate School expects that an exception made in one semester or summer session will be compensated for by a suitably modified credit load in the subsequent semester or summer session, so that, on the average, normal progress is maintained at a rate falling within the limits above. Failure to do so may jeopardize the student's academic status. Maintenance of the established credit loads and responsibility for consequences of a graduate student's change of course load rest with the student and adviser. The course load is a factor in determining whether a graduate student is classified as a full-time or part-time student; has met residence requirements; and is eligible to hold a fellowship, traineeship, assistantship, or departmental or program appointment.

Full-Time Academic Status--Students holding fellowships, traineeships, or other awards based on academic excellence are required to carry 9 or more credits each semester (fall and spring). For awards that require full-time summer registration, students should register for a minimum cumulative total of 9 credits (over all summer sessions), or SUBJ 601 (in the case of post-comprehensive doctoral candidates). A graduate assistant whose semester or summer session credit load meets or exceeds the minima in the above credit table and whose assistantship duties are directly related to his or her degree objectives is considered by the Graduate School to be engaged in full-time academic work for that semester or summer. A post-comprehensive doctoral candidate who is registered for SUBJ 601 also is so considered.

Part-Time Academic Status--A student who in any semester or summer session is registered for study but who does not meet the criteria for full-time status is considered to be engaged in part-time academic work for that semester. This includes students registered for SUBJ 611.

Credit Loads for Internationals--The Department of Homeland Security requires that international students proceed in a timely fashion toward completion of their degrees, as established by the academic department and (usually) stated on their initial immigration document. Failure to maintain normal progress toward completion of the degree during this period will jeopardize the student's ability to continue academic study, adjust status, or seek future employment in the United States. Because of this, students should not be enrolled less than full-time during fall or spring semester without prior approval of the University Office of Global Programs Directorate of International Student Advising (DISA).

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security requires the DISA to report violations of status, including failure to maintain full-time enrollment. The following is intended to provide guidance for international graduate students and for DISA in determining full-time status:

- A graduate student is considered full-time if registered for a minimum of 9 credits, excluding courses taken for audit, or if a Ph.D. candidate who has successfully completed the comprehensive examination and is registered for SUBJ 601.
- On rare occasions, and under exceptional circumstances, international students in master's degree programs who have completed all required course work and, if applicable, research for their degree, may be granted an exception to the need to maintain full-time status as defined above, for a limited period (in no case to exceed two semesters), by special petition to DISA in advance of the semester in which the exception is needed. This request must be initiated by the student using the DISA eForm system. The academic adviser will be asked through this eForm system to justify the reduced course load.
- Under all circumstances, international students must be enrolled--either full-time or approved by DISA for a reduced course load. (See Academic Information and Procedures/Registration/International Students.)

Employment--Many students depend upon part-time employment to help meet their expenses. A student who is thus employed, whether on or off campus, must recognize the time demands of a work schedule in planning an academic program. A student holding a fellowship or scholarship may not accept employment of any kind for service beyond that specifically permitted by the appointment. A graduate assistant may assist in classroom or laboratory instruction, in research or in other work. The tasks assigned to a graduate assistant often are identical in nature to those required for the advanced degree sought. Additional compensation is paid to a graduate assistant by the University for additional hours of work only with special, advance approval of the administrative head of the academic unit in which the assistantship is held, and of the chair of the student's graduate academic program, and provided that such compensation is not for additional hours of work on the assigned assistantship duties. A graduate assistant may not hold a concurrent appointment with the University other than a Fellowship Supplement.

For international students, guidelines for assistantships or employment are the same as for domestic students, with the following distinctions: (a) I-9 and W-4 forms must be processed through DISA; (b) vacation period employment may be up to forty hours per week; and (c) since Department of Homeland Security regulations on employment are subject to change, all employment off campus for international students must be cleared through DISA.

Full-Time Employment Off Campus--A candidate for the Ph.D. degree at a particular campus of the University may not count the work of any semester toward the residence requirement for this degree while engaged in full-time employment off campus or at a different campus of the University.

Staff Employee Credit Status--A full-time staff employee of the University may schedule up to 16 credits per academic year, either for credit or audit.

Full-time University employees may meet Ph.D. degree residence requirements by registering for 6 credits per semester or 4 credits per eight-week summer session and by obtaining certification from the department head as being principally engaged in activities directly relating to their degree objectives. A post-comprehensive full-time University employee may not register for SUBJ 601 (i.e., full-time thesis preparation), but may register for SUBJ 611 (part-time thesis preparation).

No academic employee above the rank of instructor or research assistant or equivalent may receive from the University a master's degree or doctoral degree in any graduate program where the faculty member has membership, teaches courses, serves on master's or doctoral committees, or has other supervisory responsibilities that might give rise to conflicts of interest. The faculty member should inform his/her department head of his/her intention to pursue an advanced degree.

University staff employees who want to take graduate degree work must first be admitted to the Graduate School.

Grading System

A grade is given solely on the basis of the instructor's judgment as to the student's scholarly attainment. The following grading system applies to graduate students: A (EXCELLENT) indicates exceptional achievement; B (GOOD) indicates substantial achievement; C (SATISFACTORY) indicates acceptable but substandard achievement; D (POOR) indicates inadequate achievement and is a failing grade for a graduate student—a course in which a D has been obtained cannot be used to meet graduate degree requirements and will not count toward total credits earned; and F (FAILURE) indicates work unworthy of any credit, and suggests that the student may not be capable of succeeding in graduate study. The grade-point equivalents for the above marks are: A, 4.00; B, 3.00; C, 2.00; D, 1.00; F, 0. A minimum grade-point average of 3.00 for work done at the University is required for all graduate degrees. In Fall 1995 a +/- grading system went into effect that includes A-, B+, B-, and C+. The grade-point equivalents are A-, 3.67; B+, 3.33; B-, 2.67; and C+, 2.33.

In addition to the quality grades listed above, three additional grade designations, DF (deferred), NG (no grade), and R, may appear on a student's transcript. If work is incomplete at the end of a semester because of extenuating circumstances, the instructor may report DF in place of a grade, which will appear temporarily on the student's record. It is not appropriate to use the DF either casually or routinely to extend a course beyond the end of the semester or to extend a course for a student who has failed so that the individual can do extra work to improve the grade. Required work should be completed and the DF resolved as soon as possible once assigned, but must be resolved (i.e., the course must be completed) no later than 12 weeks after the course end date as noted on the Registrar's Schedule of Courses, unless an extension of a specific duration to a specified date is agreed upon by the instructor and student and approved by the Graduate School that allows for a completion deadline longer than 12 weeks. A memo with a justifying statement and the agreed-upon date must be submitted by the instructor to the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services in order to request an extension. A deferred grade that is not resolved before the end of this period automatically converts to an F and cannot be changed without approval by the Graduate School. A memo with a justifying statement for changing the F grade must be submitted by the instructor to the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services in order to request a DF that has defaulted to an F grade be changed.

If an instructor does not submit a grade (including a quality grade, DF, or R) for a graduate student by the grade-reporting deadline, the designation NG (no grade) appears on the transcript. An NG that is not reconciled within 12 weeks following the posting of the NG automatically becomes an F.

A DF or NG that has converted to an F may not be changed without approval from the Graduate School. Requests for approval must be submitted by the instructor to the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services and include a justification for the change.

It is to be emphasized that no deferred (DF), missing(*), or no (NG) grades may remain on the record at those times when a student reaches an academic benchmark. Benchmarks include completion of a degree program (e.g., master's completed for a student continuing through for a doctoral degree) and the doctoral candidacy and comprehensive examinations, and final oral examination/final performances. Graduate programs may add additional benchmarks.

It is further noted that there are only three circumstances under which a course grade, once assigned, can be changed: (1) if there was a calculational or recording error on the instructor's part in the original grade assignment (see "Graduate Council policy regarding Corrected Grades for Graduate Students" below); (2) if it is a course for which an R grade has been approved and in which an initial R can be assigned and changed later to a quality grade; (3) if, as discussed above, a DF was assigned and the deadline for course completion has not yet passed.

In the case of thesis/dissertation work, either in progress or completed, and in certain courses (e.g., 590, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 894, 895, 896, 897, 899, and a few others) approved by the Graduate Council, the instructor may report the symbol R in place of a grade. An R does not influence the grade-point average. It indicates that the student has devoted adequate effort to the work scheduled but gives no indication of its quality. The symbol may be used, for instance, in courses that are officially designed to extend over more than one semester or in courses for which a quality grade is not appropriate. An R in an approved graduate course need not be changed later to a quality grade. Graduate courses approved for R grading may be credited toward fulfilling graduation requirements. However, if the instructor deems it appropriate, the R grade may be changed to a quality grade when the course work has been completed. Normally, if a quality grade is to be assigned, the grade must be reported no later than the end of the following semester.

When reported for thesis/dissertation work, an R will not influence the grade-point average and remains on the student's transcript if not converted to a quality grade within one semester of its recording. Graduate Council has established upper limits of 6 credits of quality grades for master's thesis research and 12 credits for doctoral dissertation research. The remaining credits must be assigned Rs except in the case of academic or disciplinary sanctions, in which case an F or XF grade may be assigned, as appropriate, up to the total number of thesis research credits (600 or 610) on record. (See Senate Policy 49-20, Academic Integrity, and Procedures G-9, Academic Integrity, as well as Appendix II of this Bulletin).

Pass-Fail (P/F) grading is used exclusively in certain graduate courses where it has been requested by the program and approved in advance by the graduate dean following guidelines established by Graduate Council. A grade of P does not influence the GPA, but an F does.

Corrected Grades for Graduate Students

A corrected grade may be submitted by the instructor for a course taken in the previous semester to correct a mistake made in calculating or recording a grade for a particular graduate student. Each graduate student is responsible for checking his/her semester grade report for accuracy immediately upon receipt, and for informing the instructor for any course in which the graduate student suspects that an error has been made in grading. Each instructor is responsible for checking the semester grade list in the student information system (using eLion) after grades have been recorded for a given semester.

If an error in calculating or recording a grade is brought to an instructor's attention, and the instructor agrees that an error has been made, the instructor may use the student information system to change the grade up to 12 weeks after the end of the semester in which the course was taken. No grade change can be made directly via the student information system more than 12 weeks after the end of the semester in which the course was taken; after this time, an exception, including academic justification for the requested change and for the timing of the change (i.e., after the allowable grade change period has expired), must be requested and approved through Graduate Enrollment Services.

When a course instructor is no longer available to resolve an error in calculating or recording a grade, the instructor's department head is authorized to take the necessary action.

Revised by Graduate Council, April 2011

Revised by Graduate Council, March 2014; changes effective Fall 2014*

*Note that because of the ongoing transition from ISIS to LionPATH as the University's student information system, it is possible that neither system will be configured accurately to automate the policy as it is described above until LionPATH implementation is complete; however, it is the expectation of Graduate Council that all members of the graduate community at Penn State will comply in full with the policy as described, regardless of programming/configuration quirks in the technology."

Thesis

Thesis Research--To register for thesis/dissertation research in all graduate major programs, a student uses the appropriate course number (600 for on campus, 610 for off campus) preceded by the abbreviation designating the major field. The Bursar's office assesses charges for these courses at the current rate of tuition according to the student's status at the time of registration.

Students registering for 600 or 610 should be aware that Graduate Council has established limits on the total number of research credits that can be assigned letter grades in a student's program (i.e., other than R): 6 credits for master's candidates and 12 credits for doctoral candidates.

Ph.D. Dissertation Preparation--The numbers 601 and 611 are available to Ph.D. degree candidates only and are used for special noncredit registration for dissertation preparation work. Such candidates must have passed the comprehensive examination and must have met the two-semester residence requirement. A candidate registered for SUBJ 601 is classified as a full-time student, while one registered for SUBJ 611 is classified as a part-time student.

The numbers 600, 601, 610, and 611 may not always appear in the Schedule of Courses for each semester, but they are available for registration each semester.

Thesis/Dissertation Submission--When a student completes a thesis or a dissertation, an archival copy must be submitted to the Graduate School. After acceptance by the Graduate School, the document is available through the University Libraries.

Graduation

Students who plan to graduate at the end of the current semester/session are responsible for indicating an intent to graduate. A student must initiate an intent to graduate via eLion during the designated period for that semester. Any changes to a student's graduation status after this time period must be made by contacting Graduate Enrollment Services at 814-865-1795.

Students who have been removed from the graduation list will need to initiate their intent to graduate again for the semester in which they plan to graduate.

A preliminary graduation list is prepared and reviewed by Graduate Enrollment Services soon after the deadline for each semester or summer session. Accepted theses, master's papers, and project reports are noted as may be relevant. The records of candidates who appear to have met requirements are forwarded to major and minor department heads or program chairs for review and recommendation. The final list of approved candidates appears in the fall, spring, or summer commencement program.

Only those transfer credits that have been accepted by the Graduate School and entered upon the student's transcript before the graduation deadline will be considered in evaluating a student for graduation at the end of that particular semester or summer session.

The University holds commencement exercises for graduate students three times a year: at the end of the fall and spring semesters and at the end of the summer session. Attendance at commencement exercises is expected. Diplomas are mailed to all students unable to participate in the commencement exercises. Information is available at the Office of the University Registrar, 112 Shields Building, or by accessing the Registrar's website at www.registrar.psu.edu.

Even though the student's name may appear in the commencement program, no degrees are conferred until final grade reports have been received and all requirements fulfilled. A student's transcript or diploma, or both, may be withheld until any outstanding financial obligations to the University have been paid.

DOCTORAL DEGREES

The Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.), an academic degree, and the Doctor of Education (D.Ed.) and Doctor of Musical Arts (D.M.A.), both professional degrees, are conferred by the University. Recognized as different in purpose, the three doctoral programs consequently have different requirements in certain respects.

ADMISSION

A student who has been admitted to the Graduate School and has been accepted by the department or committee in charge of a major program in which the doctorate is offered may begin working toward a doctoral degree. However, the student has no official status as a doctoral student and no assurance of acceptance as a doctoral candidate until the candidacy examination has been passed. This examination is administered by the major department or graduate program and is given early in the student's program.

It is the policy of Graduate Council not to encourage applicants to work for a second doctoral degree. (See Policy on Second Doctorates). However, the President, on recommendation of the dean of the Graduate School, will welcome, as guests, holders of earned doctoral degrees who may be visiting the University for purposes of noncredit study. Guest privileges apply to persons holding the degree from Penn State or other accredited colleges and universities. Guests may attend seminars and courses and, if space and facilities are available, carry on research. There will be no charge except for laboratory expenses. Arrangements must be made in advance with the dean of the Graduate School.

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

No specified number of courses completed or credits earned will assure attainment of the doctorate. The general requirements are based upon a period of residence, the writing of a satisfactory dissertation accepted by the doctoral committee and the Graduate School (Ph.D./D.Ed.), and the passing of a comprehensive examination and either a final oral examination (Ph.D./D.Ed.) or a final performance (D.M.A.). A doctoral program consists of such a combination of course seminars and individual study and research/scholarship as meets the minimum requirements of Graduate Council and is approved by the doctoral committee for each individual student.

A master's degree is not a prerequisite for the doctorate in some major programs. However, the first year of graduate study leading to the Ph.D. may be substantially the same as that provided for the M.A. or M.S. degree. Similarly, the first year of the D.Ed. program may be essentially the same as that provided for the M.Ed. degree, and the first year of the D.M.A. program may be essentially the same as that provided for the M.Mus. degree.

SATISFACTORY SCHOLARSHIP

A graduate student who fails to maintain satisfactory scholarship or to make acceptable progress in a degree program may be dropped from the University. One or more failing grades or a cumulative grade-point average below 3.00 for any semester or session or combination of semesters and/or sessions may be considered as evidence of failure to maintain satisfactory scholarship. Action may be initiated by the department or committee in charge of the graduate major or by the chair of the student's doctoral committee. The procedures to be followed in such action are found in Appendix III of this Bulletin.

GRADE-POINT AVERAGE

A minimum grade-point average of 3.00 for work done at the University is required for admission to the candidacy examination, the comprehensive examination, and the final oral examination/final performance, and for graduation.

TIME LIMITATION

A doctoral student is required to complete the program, including acceptance of the doctoral dissertation or the passing of the final performance, within eight years after the date of successful completion of the candidacy examination. Individual programs may set shorter time limits. Extensions may be granted by the director of Graduate Enrollment Services in appropriate circumstances.

TRANSFER CREDIT

A maximum of 30 credits from a completed master's degree earned from an institution that does not grant the doctorate in the student's major program may be accepted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for a D.Ed. degree at Penn State with no intervening time limitation. The master's degree must have been earned at a regionally accredited U.S. institution or a recognized degree-granting international institution in the country in which it operates. Thirty (30) such credits are awarded for only one master's degree.

A maximum of 30 credits from a completed master's degree earned at a regionally accredited U.S. institution or a recognized degree-granting international institution in the country in which it operates may be accepted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for a D.M.A. degree at Penn State with no intervening time limitation. Thirty (30) such credits are awarded for only one master's degree. All D.M.A. students must complete a minimum of 60 credits at Penn State.

A maximum of two full academic years of work (60 credits) beyond the baccalaureate earned at a regionally accredited U.S. institution, or a recognized degree-granting international institution in the country in which it operates, that grants the doctorate in the candidate's major program may be accepted by the Graduate School to apply toward D.Ed. degree requirements.

Because there is no Graduate Council minimum total-credit requirement for a Ph.D. degree at Penn State, 30 credits are not accepted towards Ph.D. requirements for a completed master's degree.

A maximum of 10 credits of high-quality graduate work may be transferred toward any doctoral degree at Penn State. Refer to the Transfer Courses section of this Bulletin for more information.

Subject to the approval of the adviser and the head of the major department or program chair, a student may register for research to be done away from the campus that offers the doctoral degree program.

CANDIDACY EXAMINATION

Every student who wishes to pursue a doctorate must take a candidacy examination administered by the Graduate Faculty in the graduate major program. The purpose of the candidacy examination should be to assess whether the student is capable of conducting doctoral research/scholarship based on evidence of critical thinking or other measures that the Graduate Faculty of the program view as important to a successful doctoral student. It should be taken early in the student's program (see degree-specific guidelines below). The nature of the examination varies with the program and may be the master's examination, if applicable and so prescribed by the program. The decision to admit or not to admit a student to candidacy must be made by the graduate faculty or a designated committee of graduate faculty in the program. All graduate students are required to have a minimum grade-point average of 3.00 for work done at the University and may not have deferred or missing grades at the time the candidacy examination is given.

The graduate student must be in good academic standing and must be registered as a full-time or part-time graduate degree student for the semester (excluding summer session) in which the candidacy examination is taken.

If the student is seeking dual candidacy in an approved dual-title graduate degree program, the dual-title field must be integrated into the candidacy examination of the student's major program (i.e., a single candidacy examination is administered, which incorporates both the graduate major field and the dual-title field).

For the Ph.D. student, the examination may be given after at least 18 credits have been earned in graduate courses beyond the baccalaureate. The examination must be taken within three semesters (excluding summer sessions) of entry into the doctoral program.

For the D.Ed. student, the examination should be given when the student has earned a total of at least 30 credits toward the graduate degree, including the master's program and graduate work done elsewhere. A student transferring from another graduate school with 30 or more credits earned toward a graduate degree must take the candidacy examination prior to earning more than 25 credits toward the graduate degree at Penn State.

For the D.M.A. student, the examination should be given when the student has completed two semesters in residence.

The results of all candidacy examinations, regardless of the outcome, must be reported to Graduate Enrollment Services via the Candidacy Reporting Form immediately following the examination.

ADVISERS AND DOCTORAL COMMITTEES

Following admittance to a graduate degree program, the student should confer with the head of that major program concerning procedures and the appointment of an academic adviser. Consultation or arrangement of the details of the student's semester-by-semester schedule is the function of the academic adviser. The academic adviser may be a member of the doctoral committee, or may be another member of the Graduate Faculty designated by the program head or chair of the major program for this specific duty. The academic adviser may be different than the major adviser who supervises the culminating experience (dissertation/final performance; i.e., dissertation/performance adviser).

Doctoral Committee

General guidance of a doctoral candidate is the responsibility of a doctoral committee consisting of four or more active members of the Graduate Faculty, which includes at least two faculty members in the major field. The dissertation/performance adviser must be a member of the doctoral committee. The dissertation/performance adviser usually serves as chair, but this is not required. If the candidate is also pursuing a dual-title field of study, a co-chair representing the dual-title field must be appointed. In most cases, the same individual (e.g., dissertation/performance adviser) is a member of the Graduate Faculty in both the major and dual-title fields, and in such cases may serve as sole chair.

At least one regular member of the doctoral committee must represent a field outside the candidate's major field of study in order to provide a broader range of disciplinary perspectives and expertise. This committee member is referred to as the "Outside Field Member." In cases where the candidate is also pursuing a dual-title field of study, the dual-title representative to the committee may serve as the Outside Field Member.

Additionally, in order to avoid potential conflicts of interest, the primary appointment of at least one regular member of the doctoral committee must be in an administrative unit that is outside the unit in which the dissertation/performance adviser's primary appointment is held (i.e., the adviser's administrative home; in the case of tenure-line faculty, this is the individual's tenure home). This committee member is referred to as the "Outside Unit Member." In the case of co-advisers, the Outside Unit Member must be from outside the administrative home(s) of both co-advisers. In some cases, an individual may have a primary appointment outside the administrative home of the student's dissertation/performance adviser and also represent a field outside the student's major field of study; in such cases, the same individual may serve as both the Outside Field Member and the Outside Unit Member.

If the candidate has a minor, that field must be represented on the committee by a "Minor Field Member." (For additional information related to minors for D.Ed. students, see "Major Program and Minor Field" under D.Ed.—Additional Specific Requirements" in this Bulletin.)

The doctoral committee is appointed by the director of Graduate Enrollment Services, upon recommendation of the head of the major program, soon after the student is admitted to candidacy. The dean of the Graduate School may, on occasion, appoint one or more members of the committee in addition to those recommended by the head of the program.

A person who is not a member of the Graduate Faculty (and may not be affiliated with Penn State) who is otherwise qualified and has particular expertise in the candidate's research area may be added as a "Special Member," upon recommendation by the head of the program and approval of the director of Graduate Enrollment Services. A Special Member is expected to participate fully in the functions of the doctoral committee. If the Special Member is asked only to read and approve the doctoral dissertation or to evaluate the final performance, that person is designated a Special Signatory. Occasionally, Special Signatories may be drawn from within the Penn State faculty in particular situations.

Graduate Faculty officially appointed by the Graduate School to a doctoral committee who then leave Penn State may maintain that committee appointment for up to one year if the student's graduate program and the dean of the Graduate School, through the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services, approve the request for this exception. A retired or emeritus faculty member may serve as a doctoral committee chair if, and only if, he/she was officially appointed and began chairing the committee prior to retirement and has the continuing approval of the program head and the dean of the Graduate School, through the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services. Requests must be sent by the program head to the director of Graduate Enrollment Services. Otherwise, the committee must be revised to either remove the faculty member from the committee or change the individual's appointment to a Special Member.

The membership of doctoral committees should be reviewed periodically by the chair or head of the program to ensure that all members continue to qualify for service on the committee in their designated roles. For example, if type of appointments, employment at the University, etc., have changed since initial appointment to the committee, changes to the committee membership may be necessary. If changes are warranted, they must be made as soon as possible to prevent future problems that may delay academic progress for the student (e.g., ability to conduct the comprehensive examination or final oral examination/final performance).

The graduate program head/chair also must review periodically the Graduate Faculty listing for his/her program on the Graduate School's website to ensure that those listings are accurate.

Chair

The chair or at least one co-chair must be a member of the graduate faculty of the doctoral program in which the candidate is enrolled. A retired or emeritus faculty member may chair a doctoral committee if he/she was officially appointed and began chairing the committee prior to retirement and has the approvals noted above. The primary duties of the chair are to: (1) maintain the academic standards of the doctoral program, Graduate Council, and the Graduate School and assure that all procedures are carried out fairly, (2) ensure that the comprehensive examination and final oral examination/final performance are conducted in a timely fashion, (3) arrange and conduct all meetings, and (4) ensure that requirements set forth by the committee are implemented in the final version of the dissertation (Ph.D./D.Ed.)/final performance (D.M.A.).

Responsibilities of Doctoral Committees

The doctoral committee is responsible for approving the broad outline of the student's program and should review the program as soon as possible after the student's admission to candidacy. Moreover, continuing communication among the student, the committee chair, the dissertation/performance adviser, and the members of the committee is strongly recommended, to preclude misunderstandings and to develop a collegial relationship between the candidate and the committee.

COMPETENCIES

ENGLISH COMPETENCE

Candidates for all doctoral degrees are required to demonstrate high-level competence in the use of the English language, including reading, writing, and speaking, as part of the language and communication requirements for the doctorate. Graduate programs are expected to establish mechanisms for assessing and improving competence of both domestic and international students. Assessments should include pieces of original writing. Programs and advisers should identify any deficiencies before or at the candidacy examination and direct students into appropriate remedial activities. Competence must be formally attested by the program before the doctoral candidate's comprehensive examination is scheduled. (Note: Passage of the minimal TOEFL or IELTS requirement does not demonstrate the level of competence expected of a doctoral degree candidate and for conferral of a doctorate from Penn State.)

COMMUNICATION AND FOREIGN LANGUAGE COMPETENCE

Although no Graduate Council requirement for communication and foreign language competence exists, doctoral programs may have program-specific communication and/or foreign language requirements that provide an important benefit to students and are appropriate to the field.

In addition to demonstrating competence in English as described above, each candidate for a doctoral degree is required to meet any communication and foreign language requirements set forth by the respective doctoral degree program. The candidate should ascertain specific communication and foreign language requirements, if any, by contacting the head of the graduate program, whose name appears in the program description under Graduate Programs.

DOCTORAL EXAMINATION REQUIREMENTS

(Comprehensive Examinations [all doctoral degrees]; Final Oral Examinations [Ph.D./D.Ed.]/Final Performances [D.M.A.]

The doctoral examinations (the comprehensive examination and the final oral examination/final performance) are administered/overseen and evaluated by the entire doctoral committee.

All candidates are required to have a minimum grade-point average of 3.00 for work done at the University at the time a doctoral examination is given, and may not have deferred or missing grades.

The graduate student must be in good academic standing and must be registered as a full-time or part-time graduate degree student for the semester in which the doctoral examination is taken.

The program head will notify Graduate Enrollment Services, providing two weeks' notice, when the candidate is ready to schedule the comprehensive examination or the final oral examination/final performance. Doctoral examinations are scheduled and announced officially by the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services upon recommendation of the program head, and must not be held without official notification from the Graduate School. Two weeks' notice is required by the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services for scheduling any doctoral examination.

It is expected that doctoral examinations will take place at the campus location of the graduate center offering the program, and the graduate student must be physically present at any doctoral examination.

- Ph.D./D.Ed.: The dissertation adviser, as well as the chair of the doctoral committee (if not the same individual as the dissertation adviser), along with additional members of the committee to total a minimum of three, also must be physically present at the comprehensive/final examinations. (Thus, for a five-person committee, two members could participate via distance.) Requests for exceptions to allow participation of any committee member via distance must accompany the Examination Request Form, and must be submitted to the director of Graduate Enrollment Services for approval at least two weeks prior to the date of the examination. Of those approved to participate via distance, no more than one member may participate via telephone; any or all of those approved to participate via distance may participate via interactive videoconferencing. Special arrangements, i.e., requirements for meeting participation via distance, must be communicated to the student and all doctoral committee members well in advance of the examination.
- D.M.A.: All committee members must be physically present at the oral comprehensive examination and the final performance; the examination and the performance will be scheduled at a time when all members agree to be present.

If a committee member is unable to participate in any of the doctoral examinations and this results in not enough members serving on the committee (i.e., four or more active members of the Graduate Faculty), another Penn State graduate faculty member will need to be appointed officially to the doctoral committee to replace the absent member in order to constitute a legitimate doctoral committee. A revised committee appointment form must be submitted to Graduate Enrollment Services, removing the individual as a regular committee member and requesting the replacement committee member. These changes and approvals must occur before the actual examination takes place (ad hoc substitutes are not permitted).

A favorable vote of at least two-thirds of the members of the committee is required for passing a comprehensive or final oral examination or a final performance. If a candidate fails an examination/performance, it is the responsibility of the doctoral committee to determine whether the student will be granted a second opportunity to take the examination or to perform. Regardless of the outcome and of the committee's decision about whether to grant a second opportunity, the program head must report the results of each scheduled examination/performance immediately to Graduate Enrollment Services.

COMPREHENSIVE EXAMINATION

When a candidate for a doctoral degree has substantially completed all course work, a comprehensive examination is given (for the D.M.A., all required recitals except the final performance [i.e., two solo recitals, two chamber music recitals, and a lecture-recital with pre-approved monograph] also must have been completed successfully prior to the scheduling of the comprehensive examination). The examination is intended to evaluate the candidate's mastery of the major, and if appropriate, the minor field and whether the candidate is prepared to embark upon his/her dissertation research (Ph.D./D.Ed.) or preparation for the final performance (D.M.A.).

Official requests to add a minor to a doctoral candidate's academic record must be submitted to Graduate Enrollment Services prior to establishment of the doctoral committee and prior to scheduling of the comprehensive examination. More information regarding minors may be found as noted below.

- For Ph.D. candidates:
http://bulletins.psu.edu/bulletins/whitebook/degree\_requirements.cfm?section=degreeReq2
- For D.Ed. candidates:
http://bulletins.psu.edu/bulletins/whitebook/degree\_requirements.cfm?section=degreeReq3
- For general information regarding minors:
bulletins.psu.edu/graduate/programs/minors

As noted above, doctoral candidates must have satisfied the English competence and any program-specific communication and foreign language requirement before scheduling the comprehensive examination.

(Note: Some programs require students to pass various "area" examinations, "cumulative" examinations, or other similar examinations, or require presentation of a dissertation proposal, prior to the comprehensive examination. These are matters of graduate program policy, distinct from the general policies of Graduate Council described here.)

The format for the comprehensive examination may be entirely oral, or it may have both a written and an oral component.

When a period of more than six years has elapsed between the passing of the comprehensive examination and the completion of the program, the student is required to pass a second comprehensive examination before the final oral examination or final performance will be scheduled.

FINAL ORAL EXAMINATION (Ph.D./D.Ed.)/FINAL PERFORMANCE (D.M.A.)

The doctoral candidate who has satisfied all other requirements for the degree will be scheduled by the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services, on the recommendation of the head of the graduate program, to take a final oral examination (Ph.D./D.Ed.)/give a final performance (D.M.A.). Two weeks' notice is required by the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services for scheduling this final benchmark. Typically, the final oral examination/final performance may not be scheduled until at least three months have elapsed since the comprehensive examination was passed, although the director of Graduate Enrollment Services may grant a waiver in appropriate cases.

Final Oral Examination (Ph.D./D.Ed.)—Both the dissertation adviser/committee chair and the student are responsible for ensuring the completion of a draft of the dissertation and for adequate consultation with members of the doctoral committee well in advance of the final oral examination. Major revisions of the dissertation should be completed before this examination.

It is the responsibility of the doctoral candidate and committee chair/dissertation adviser to provide a copy of the dissertation to each member of the doctoral committee at least two weeks before the date of the scheduled examination. The dissertation should be complete and in its final draft, with correct and polished content and style, appropriate notes, bibliography, tables, etc., at the time it is distributed to the committee members. If a committee member finds that the final draft is not correct and polished with respect to content and style, it is his/her responsibility to notify the committee chair/dissertation adviser at least one week in advance of the final oral examination date. The committee member should indicate his/her concerns regarding the draft and may recommend consideration of postponement of the examination to the committee chair/dissertation adviser. The chair/adviser, in consultation with committee members, is responsible for notifying the student and assessing whether the student can make the necessary revisions to the final draft before the examination date. If it is determined that revisions cannot be made in time, the final oral examination must be postponed.

The final examination of the doctoral candidate is an oral examination administered and evaluated by the entire doctoral committee. It consists of an oral presentation of the dissertation by the candidate and a period of questions and responses. These will relate in large part to the dissertation, but may cover the candidate's entire program of study, because a major purpose of the examination is also to assess the general scholarly attainments of the candidate. The portion of the examination in which the dissertation is presented is open to the University community and the public; therefore, it is expected that the examination will take place at the campus location of the academic unit offering the program.

If a committee member is unable to participate in the final oral examination, the member may sign as a special signatory. A revised committee appointment form will need to be submitted to Graduate Enrollment Services, removing the individual as a regular committee member and if it is desired to designate that individual as a special signatory, a memo from the program head must accompany the revised committee form, requesting that the committee member be moved to a special signatory. As noted above, if there are then not enough members serving on the committee (i.e., four or more active members of the Graduate Faculty), another Penn State graduate faculty member will need to be appointed officially to the doctoral committee to replace the absent member in order to constitute a legitimate doctoral committee. These changes and approvals must occur before the actual examination takes place (ad hoc substitutes are not permitted).

The committee examines the dissertation and administers the final oral examination, and once any final revisions have been made and the dissertation is deemed acceptable, committee members sign the doctoral signatory page.

Final Performance (D.M.A.)—The culminating experience of the D.M.A. degree is a public final performance (solo recital) that will be discussed and evaluated by the doctoral committee.

The student who approaches the final recital will have passed the comprehensive examination, as well as all previous required recitals (as described above, under "Comprehensive Examination"). The repertoire for the final performance will be decided by the student in consultation with the performance adviser and other faculty members in the major area, after which the student will prepare the final performance independently, without weekly coaching. The performance adviser may request a pre-hearing of the recital material before the doctoral committee members from the major area; the results of this pre-hearing are intended to be advisory and will not necessarily affect the scheduled final performance. The student's full doctoral committee will attend the public recital (i.e., the final performance) at University Park and evaluate it; as part of the evaluation, the doctoral committee will discuss the final performance with the student in private.

If a committee member is unable to attend the final performance in person, resulting in not enough members serving on the committee (i.e., four or more active members of the Graduate Faculty), another Penn State graduate faculty member will need to be appointed officially to the doctoral committee as noted above to replace the absent member in order to constitute a legitimate doctoral committee. A revised committee appointment form must be submitted to Graduate Enrollment Services, removing the individual as a regular committee member and requesting the replacement committee member. These changes and approvals must occur before the actual performance takes place (ad hoc substitutes are not permitted). Exceptions to accommodate unexpected last-minute situations that may prevent a committee member's attendance in person but that may allow for the committee member to participate at a distance (e.g., by interactive videoconferencing) may be granted but must be requested and approved through Graduate Enrollment Services before the actual performance takes place.

DISSERTATION ACCEPTANCE

Completion of the requirements of a Ph.D. or D.Ed. degree program entails acceptance of the dissertation, as indicated by the signatures of at least two-thirds of the doctoral committee, as well as the head of the graduate program, on the doctoral signatory page, and by its acceptance as meeting the editorial standards of the Graduate School, so that it constitutes a suitable archival document for inclusion in the University Libraries. Thus, it is to be noted that passage of the final oral examination is necessary but not sufficient for award of the degree; the dissertation must be accepted as the ultimate step for the Ph.D. or the D.Ed. and is to be made available to the public through inclusion in the University Libraries.

Update: Spring 2014

Ph.D.--ADDITIONAL SPECIFIC REQUIREMENTS

The degree of Doctor of Philosophy is conferred in recognition of high attainment and productive scholarship in some special field of learning as evidenced by:

1. The satisfactory completion of a prescribed period of study and investigation;
2. The preparation and formal acceptance of a dissertation involving independent research;
3. The successful passing of examinations covering both the special subject and the general field of learning of which this subject forms a part.

Residence Requirements--There is no required minimum number of credits or semesters of study, but over some twelve-month period during the interval between admission to the Ph.D. program and completion of the Ph.D. program, the candidate must spend at least two semesters (summer sessions are not included) as a registered full-time student engaged in academic work at the University Park campus, the Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center, or Penn State Harrisburg. Full-time University employees must be certified by the department as devoting half-time or more to graduate studies and/or thesis research to meet the degree requirements. Students should note that 601 cannot be used to meet the full-time residence requirement. (See Credit Loads and Academic Status.)

Continuous Registration--It is expected that all graduate students will be properly registered at a credit level appropriate to their degree of activity. (See Registration.) After a Ph.D. candidate has passed the comprehensive examination, the student must register continuously for each fall and spring semester until the final oral examination is passed. (Students who are in residence during summers must also register for summer sessions if they are using University facilities and/or faculty resources, except for Graduate Lecturers/Researchers, who are not required to enroll for any credits unless they are first-semester graduate students, or are required to be enrolled by their graduate program.)

Post-comprehensive Ph.D. students can maintain registration by registering for credits in the usual way, or by registering for noncredit 601 or 611, depending upon whether they are devoting full time or part time to thesis preparation. Students may take 601 plus up to 3 additional credits of course work for audit by paying only the dissertation fee. Students wishing to take up to 3 additional credits of course work for credit, i.e., 590, 602, etc., with 601 may do so by paying the dissertation fee and an additional flat fee. Enrolling for either 3 credits for audit or credit will be the maximum a student may take with SUBJ 601 without special approval by the Graduate School. NOTE: Registration for additional credits above this will incur an additional charge at the appropriate tuition per-credit rate (in state or out of state). Students wishing to take more than 3 additional credits of course work must register for 600 or 611 (i.e., not for 601, which is full-time thesis preparation).

Note that the least expensive way for a student to maintain full-time status while working on research and thesis preparation is to register for 601. This clearly is the procedure of choice for international students who need to maintain status as full-time students for visa purposes.

If a Ph.D. student will not be in residence for an extended period for compelling reasons, the director of Graduate Enrollment Services will consider a petition for a waiver of the continuous registration requirement. The petition must come from the doctoral committee chair and carry the endorsement of the department or program chair.

Minor Field--A Ph.D. candidate is not required by the Graduate Council to have a minor field of study. However, a department or a committee in charge of a major field may require a candidate to offer work in a minor field, or a student may elect such a program with the permission of the doctoral committee.

A doctoral minor consists of no fewer than 15 graduate credits of integrated or articulated work in one field related to, but different from, that of the major. Programs should consider that a doctoral minor should represent curriculum and study that reflect graduate-level concepts and scholarship, with a preponderance of courses at the 500-level, however, at a minimum, 6 credits must be at the 500-level. A minor may be taken in one of the approved graduate degree programs offered at Penn State, or in a formal graduate minor program that has been approved by the Graduate Council, such as those listed in this Bulletin on the following web page: <http://bulletins.psu.edu/bulletins/whitebook/minors.cfm>. The minor field chosen must have the approval of the departments or committees responsible for both the major program and the minor field. If more than one minor is being proposed, a separate group of courses must be taken for each (i.e., none of the courses may be used concurrently). If the student received a master's minor in the same field as is being proposed for a doctoral minor, the 15 credits taken must be above and beyond those used for the master's minor. However, credits earned in the master's program over and above those applied to either the master's minor or major may be applied to a minor in the Ph.D. program.

At least one faculty member from the minor field must be on the candidate's doctoral committee.

Dissertation --The ability to do independent research and competence in scholarly exposition must be demonstrated by the preparation of a dissertation on some topic related to the major subject. It should represent a significant contribution to knowledge, be presented in a scholarly manner, reveal an ability on the part of the candidate to do independent research of high quality, and indicate considerable experience in using a variety of research techniques. The contents and conclusions of the dissertation must be defended at the time of the final oral examination.

When a complete draft of the dissertation has been compiled, the student must submit it to the Thesis Office for format review. Submission for format review must be made by the announced deadline for the semester/session in which the degree will be conferred. After a successful defense and after signed approval by the advisers and/or committee members and the department head or graduate program chair, the final archival copy of the dissertation (incorporating any format changes requested by the Thesis Office), must be uploaded as an eTD (electronic dissertation) by the announced deadline for the semester/session in which the degree will be conferred. It is also expected that the student will provide a final archival copy of the dissertation to the office of the department or program head.

A Thesis Guide, which gives details concerning format and other requirements, can be accessed at: <http://www.gradschool.psu.edu/current-students/etd/>

D.Ed.--Additional Specific Requirements

The D.Ed. degree is conferred in recognition of advanced preparation of a high order for work in the profession of education as evidenced by:

1. Satisfactory completion of a prescribed period of study;
2. Ability to apply scientific principles to practitioner problems in a variety of education endeavors;
3. Preparation of dissertation demonstrating ability to undertake an educational problem with originality and independent thought;
4. Successful performance on major and minor examinations, showing a satisfactory grasp of the field of specialization and its relation to allied education areas.

Residence Requirement--A minimum of 90 credits, of which at least 30 credits must be earned in residence at University Park campus, or Penn State Harrisburg if the degree is offered at that location, is required for the D.Ed. degree. The D.Ed. candidate may meet the requirements by attending summer sessions unless the major department requires a period of registration during the regular academic year. A candidate may register for a maximum of 30 credits of research in absentia, but none of these may count toward the minimum of 30 credits that must be earned at the University Park campus or Penn State Harrisburg if the degree is offered at that location. It is expected that students will register for a minimum of 15 credits of thesis research.

Major Program and Minor Field--The program of study includes a major and either a minor or a group of general studies. A majority of the courses offered in fulfillment of the requirements must be in the major program of study.

A candidate choosing to minor in a major outside the fields of professional education (such as history) shall have a minor consisting of no fewer than 15 graduate credits in professional education, as recommended to the director of Graduate Enrollment Services early in the major program with the approval of a faculty adviser from the major and minor areas.

A candidate choosing a major in one of the approved programs in professional education must also choose either a minor or a group of general studies with the approval of the major program chair. In this case, a minor consists of no fewer than 15 graduate credits in a field considered by the major program committee to provide valuable intellectual and/or professional depth and breadth for the candidate.

There must be at least one faculty member from the minor field on the candidate's doctoral committee. The minor may include courses taken as part of a previous master's degree program, if the minor is in an area different from the master's, and if the courses were not a required part of the program, e.g., used to meet a total credit requirement.

An acceptable general studies group consists of at least 15 graduate credits, including those taken as part of a previous master's degree (up to 6 credits), considered by the major program committee to provide valuable intellectual breadth for the candidate. (Note that a general studies group is not a minor and is not entered as such on the student's transcript.)

A candidate entering with a master's degree in a field that would normally be regarded as appropriate for a minor may petition the major program committee for a waiver of the minor requirement. If the program chair then approves, a request for a waiver may be submitted by the chair to the director of Graduate Enrollment Services. Waiving the minor requirement does not reduce the residence or total credit requirements for the D.Ed. degree.

Comprehensive Examination--In addition to demonstrating a high level of competence in the subject matter in the major program and minor field, each candidate must show, by a comprehensive examination, an understanding of current theories of education and the ability to apply the techniques and findings of educational research so far as they bear upon the teaching of the subject matter. The candidate must also be able to understand and contribute to the technical and professional literature in the field, and to criticize learned procedures in the light of historical trends and practices in this and other countries. Command of the tools for a thorough study of the problems of education is necessary and must include competence in the use of statistical methods. For certain students the requirements may include a reading knowledge of one or more foreign languages.

All candidates are required to have a minimum grade-point average of 3.00 for academic work done at the University at the time the comprehensive examination is given, and may not have deferred or missing grades. The student must be in good academic standing and must be registered as a full-time or part-time student for the semester in which the examination is taken.

Dissertation--Evidence of a high degree of scholarship, competence in scholarly exposition, and ability to select, organize, and apply knowledge must be presented by the candidate in the form of a written dissertation. The candidate must demonstrate a capacity for independent thought, as well as ability and originality in the application of educational principles or in the development of a new generalization under scientific controls. A dissertation may be based upon a product or project of a professional nature, provided scholarly research is involved. For example, it may be based upon the solution of a professional problem concerned with the development of a curriculum, or a product of creative effort related to education. However, in order to be acceptable as a dissertation, professional project must be accompanied by a written discourse demonstrating the nature of the research and including such theories, experiments, and other rational processes as were used in effecting the final result. The topic and outline of the proposed dissertation must have the approval of the doctoral committee.

When a complete draft of the dissertation has been compiled, the student must submit it to the Thesis Office for format review. Submission for format review must be made by the announced deadline for the semester/session in which the degree will be conferred. After a successful defense and after signed approval by the advisers and/or committee members and the department head or graduate program chair, the final archival copy of the dissertation (incorporating any format changes requested by the Thesis Office), must be uploaded as an eTD (electronic dissertation) by the announced deadline for the semester/session in which the degree will be conferred. It is also expected that the student will provide a final archival copy of the dissertation to the office of the department or program head.

D.M.A.--Additional Specific Requirements

The Doctor of Musical Arts requires four semesters in residence. The degree is designed to provide students with a thorough background of preparation and experience in professional-level performance and in the literature of the instrument, while becoming sufficiently knowledgeable about the discipline of music as a whole, in order to teach at the collegiate or university level. This background knowledge would include, but not be limited to, music theory, analysis, and history. Sixty credits are required beyond the Master of Music; if an exceptional student is admitted before completion of a prior Master of Music degree, the student will complete a total of 30 credits in categories equivalent to those required for the M.Mus., in addition to the 60 required for the D.M.A. A candidacy examination will follow upon two semesters completed in residence. The comprehensive examination will occur upon the completion of course work, before the final recital. The culminating experience of the D.M.A. degree is a public performance: three memorized solo recitals are required (the final recital is prepared independently), and two recitals of chamber music. Although no written thesis is required, a lecture-recital is required, with a pre-approved monograph text.

Pennsylvania Department of Education Certificate Candidates

For information, see

www.ed.psu.edu/certification

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT CERTIFICATES

Postbaccalaureate candidates who want to pursue course work simply for their professional development and/or a permanent Level II certificate should apply to the Graduate School as special nondegree graduate students.

M.A. and M.S.--Additional Specific Requirements

The Master of Arts and the Master of Science degrees have similar requirements, the general major area determining which degree is conferred. Programs for both degrees are strongly oriented toward research.

A minimum of 30 credits at the 400 level or higher is required, of which at least 20 must be earned at the established graduate campus/center of the University where the program is offered. Some graduate programs require additional credits; the exact number can be determined by consulting the specific program description in the Graduate Programs section of the Graduate Bulletin. A minor is not required of all candidates for the M.A. or M.S. degree. A department or committee in charge of a major program may require a candidate to offer work in a minor field, or the minor may be elected with the permission of the student's committee.

Any member of the Penn State faculty with at least assistant professor rank may participate in the guidance and examination of master's candidates and sign master's thesis signatory pages. Special signatories occasionally are requested and approved for master's thesis. The supervisor of the master's work must be a member of the Graduate Faculty.

A master's minor consists of no fewer than 6 credits of integrated or articulated work in one field related to, but different from, that of the major. Programs should consider that a minor at the graduate level should represent curriculum and study that reflect graduate-level concepts and scholarship, with a preponderance of courses at the 500 level; at a minimum, 3 credits must be at the 500 level. A minor program must be in one of the approved graduate degree programs offered at Penn State and must have the approval of the departments or committees responsible for both the major program and the minor field. For more information regarding minors, please see the Graduate Minors section of the Graduate Bulletin.

The major department or the committee in charge of the major program is the judge as to the suitability of a field for the minor and of its relevance to the major. The minor field department has the responsibility of accepting or rejecting students, advising on courses to be taken by the candidate in the field, examining the candidate in the area of studies undertaken in the field, and certifying that the minor requirements have been met.

At least 18 credits in the 500 and 600 series, combined, must be included in the program. A minimum of 12 credits in course work (400, 500, and 800 series), as contrasted with research, must be completed in the major program, with a minimum number of 800-level credits as appropriate to the degree and as approved by the graduate program to be applied to degree requirements. A thesis is required of many candidates for these degrees; if no thesis is required, students must present a suitable scholarly essay or paper.

If a student is required to write a thesis, at least 6 credits in thesis research (600 or 610) must be included in the program. If no thesis is required, at least 18 credits must be in 500-level courses.

A thesis is prepared under the direction of the department or program in which the candidate's major work is taken. Under certain conditions a student may complete the thesis off campus. To do so, satisfactory arrangements must be made in advance with the adviser and the head of the major department or program.

When a complete draft of the thesis has been compiled, the student must submit it to the Office of Theses and Dissertations for format review. Submission for format review must be made by the announced deadline for the semester/session in which the degree will be conferred. After a successful defense and after signed approval by the advisers and/or committee members and the head of the graduate program, the final archival copy of the thesis (incorporating any format changes requested by the Office of Theses and Dissertations) must be deposited with the Office of Theses and Dissertations or uploaded to the eTD website by the announced deadline for the semester/session in which the degree will be conferred. It is also expected that the student will provide a final archival copy of the thesis to the office of the head of the program.

The Thesis/Dissertation Guide provides details concerning format and other requirements.

As noted above, candidates who are not required to write a thesis must present a suitable scholarly essay or paper. Its nature and extent shall be determined by the major program. The department head or program chair shall report to the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services that the student has met the approved requirement. The department or program is responsible for ensuring that the work is finalized by the published deadline for the semester/session. The program head may require one or more copies of the essay for the program's library or files.

Some graduate programs that emphasize research admit only students interested in pursuing the Ph.D. degree.

Requirements for the M.A. degree at Penn State Harrisburg differ somewhat from the above and are outlined under the major programs in American Studies, Humanities, Community Psychology and Social Change, and Applied Psychology. These programs are available only at Penn State Harrisburg.

M.B.A.--Additional Specific Requirements

Master of Business Administration degree programs are offered at the University Park campus, Penn State Great Valley, Penn State Harrisburg, and Penn State Erie.

University Park Campus--The purpose of the MBA program at the University Park campus is to develop professional managerial knowledge and skills as these are applied to decisions in complex organizations. The curriculum was developed by the graduate business faculty to blend technical rigor, managerial theory, and integrative learning experiences through case studies and other teaching methods.

A minimum of 48 graduate credits is required, with a minimum of 42 credits at the 500 level. Twenty-six credits must be in specific core courses. Also required are 22 credits in portfolio and breadth electives. Work for this degree may be started in the fall semester only. Applications for this AACSB-accredited M.B.A program must include the results of the Graduate Management Admission Test.

Penn State Harrisburg--The goals of the Harrisburg MBA program are to provide graduates with a foundation for personal and professional growth and lifelong learning; a firm grounding in the academic disciplines underlying the field of business; participative strengths; and decision making, problem solving, and critical thinking skills. Major emphasis is placed on the social, legal, and ethical context of business—particularly ethical values needed in the conduct of business. Program faculty place high value on teaching and currency of curriculum, an emphasis on oral and written communication, collaborative learning, and cross-functional integration of concepts. The students served by the MBA program are, primarily, employees of area business, government, and not-for-profit organizations who reside within the Capital Region and study on a part-time basis. However, either full- or part-time study is possible. The M.B.A. is also offered as a concurrent MBA/Ph.D. program with the College of Medicine at the Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center Department of Pharmacology, and concurrent MBA/J.D. degree program with The Dickinson School of Law.

The M.B.A. requires a minimum of 30 graduate credits, and is offered at the college's Middletown campus and in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Eighteen of these credits are in prescribed areas of business, including accounting, finance, management, marketing, and information systems. An additional 12 credits are elective, permitting students to select courses in such areas as e-business, human resource managements, financial analysis, or general business to meet their personal and professional goals. Depending on their level of preparation, some students may need to take additional course work beyond the baccalaureate to permit them to begin their advanced business studies with a common conceptual foundation and adequate understanding of the integrated nature of the business enterprise. Applications to this AACSB-accredited program must include results of the Graduate Management Admission Test and two letters of recommendation. In addition, applicants whose first language is not English or who have not received a prior degree from an institution in which the language of instruction was English must provide scores on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL).

Penn State Erie--The Penn State Erie M.B.A. is a general degree emphasizing development of the planning and problem-solving skills crucial in middle and upper management. Course work emphasizes the integration of business functions and the practical application of theory in the business world, using simulated problems and actual situations students are experiencing at work. Many students are fully employed professionals who bring a wealth of knowledge and experience to the classroom. Both full- and part-time study is possible and the program can be completed by attending evening classes. The Master of Business Administration degree program consists of three parts:

1. Foundation Core Courses (18 credits): The courses introduce students to the ethical, legal, social, political, technological, and societal environment of business, accounting, economics, finance, management, marketing, operations management, and the application of quantitative methods to the analysis of business problems. The foundation core is required of all applicants who have not completed an undergraduate degree in business or previous undergraduate or graduate course work relevant to the foundation core requirements.
2. Advanced Required Courses (15 credits): These courses build on the knowledge base established in the foundation core and provide greater depth of knowledge in the subject areas included. This component of the MBA program consists of five 3-credit courses that cover advanced topics in cost management, information systems management, managing a diverse workforce, global operations and supply chain management, and strategic management and business policy.
3. Elective Courses (15 credits): All students are required to take 15 credits of elective courses covering advanced topics of their choice. Electives must include at least 3 credits of community outreach-oriented and 3 credits of internationally focused course work from the program-approved list of courses.

Penn State Great Valley--The M.B.A. at Great Valley's School of Graduate Professional Studies is designed to meet the needs of the working professional desiring to advance her or his career. The M.B.A. requires 45 credits for degree completion. Courses are categorized into four groups: core, advanced, elective, and capstone. Students may be exempt from up to 15 credits from the core courses based on academic preparation and test scores. Students entering the program are expected to meet preprogram requirements that build a foundation for effective communication skills and quantitative analysis.

In addition to the general M.B.A. program, options are available in Biotechnology and Health Industry Management, and New Ventures and Entrepreneurial Studies. Classes are offered evenings and Saturdays in seven-week sessions, and the program may be completed in as little as 18 months. M.B.A. students are admitted year-round at the beginning of each of the seven-week sessions. Applications must include the results of a Graduate Management Admissions Test. ## M.Ed.--Additional Specific Requirements

The programs leading to the degree of Master of Education provide preparation for increased professional competence in education. They should be distinguished carefully from the research-oriented programs that lead to the academic degrees of Master of Arts or Master of Science. In most major programs the requirements for admission include 18 credits in education and related fields.

A minimum of 30 graduate credits is required for the degree, of which at least 20 must be earned at the campus/center where the degree program is offered; at least 24 must be in course work. This degree is also offered in certain programs at Penn State Harrisburg and Penn State Great Valley.

Major Programs in the Fields of Education--A student can major in one of the approved programs in professional education and proceed under the guidance of a graduate faculty member of the appropriate major. At least 18 credits at the 500 level or above (with at least 6 credits in 500 level) must be included in the program. Most programs of this type require at least 6 credits to be earned outside the major as providing valuable breadth for the candidate. However, this policy differs among programs. Specific information about such requirements is found under the individual program listings in this bulletin or from the program's coordinator. It is important for potential students to obtain the degree requirements of the programs in which they are interested, because many programs specify degree requirements in excess of 30 credits and the manner in which credits are to be earned: required, elective, in or out of the major.

Major Programs Outside the Fields of Education--A student who wants to earn an M.Ed. in a specific subject-matter field, such as economics, mathematics, German, or a broader area, can choose such a program as a major and take a majority of work in it under the guidance of the department offering that major. The candidate is required to earn 6 credits in education as directed by the faculty of one of the approved graduate programs in professional education.

Culminating Experience--All M.Ed. programs require a significant culminating or "capstone" experience. Each program has established the specific manner for meeting the requirement, which may take the form of a thesis, production, paper, exhibition, comprehensive examination or other similar experience serving to demonstrate comprehensive and in-depth knowledge of the field of study. The nature and extent of this work and when it is to be undertaken within the program of study shall be determined by the major program and reported to the Office of Graduate Enrollment Services of the Graduate School.

Thesis or Paper--The thesis or paper must be of considerable proportion and must be clearly and definitively indicative of the capacity to describe a serious intellectual investigation, study, critical analysis, or evaluation; to acquire, integrate, and analyze information; to draw conclusions logically; and to present the experience adequately and professionally in writing. The requirements of the Graduate School regarding a thesis must be met. Programs may impose other requirements regarding the master's paper, including submission of more than one copy for disposition at the program level.

Exhibition or Production--The capstone experience must be of comparable rigor as that required for a thesis or master's paper. While the format of the experience will differ among programs, all such capstone experiences must result in definitive evidence of satisfaction of the above noted qualities. Some tangible written report is required, although the length and nature of this report are to be left to the department or program.

Other Capstone Experience--If the program wishes to use some other mechanism to demonstrate culminating evidence of analytical ability and synthesis of material, it may do so upon approval by the Graduate Council. The program or department must report to Graduate Enrollment Services evidence that the student has met the approved requirement.

M.E.M.--Additional Specific Requirements

The Master of Engineering Management is developed for students with a background in engineering or science. Applicants with a four-year undergraduate degree in engineering, mathematics, physics, computer science, or a related discipline will be considered. All students in the Master of Engineering Management program must complete a minimum of 33 credits, including 18 credits in core courses at the 500 level and completion of the capstone course.

M.Eng.--Additional Specific Requirements

The Master of Engineering degree programs provide training for advanced professional competence in several fields of engineering. This professional master's degree emphasizes practical application of knowledge for solving problems and should be distinguished carefully from the research-oriented programs that lead to the academic degree of Master of Science. A minimum of 30 graduate credits is required, of which 20 must be earned at the campus/center where the degree program is offered. At least 18 credits must be earned in 500- or 800-level courses; a minimum of 6 of these 18 credits must be earned in 500-level courses.

Culminating Experience--All M.Eng. programs require a significant culminating or "capstone" experience. Each program has established the specific manner for meeting the requirement, which may take the form of a paper, project, internship, or other similar experience serving to demonstrate comprehensive and in-depth knowledge of the practice of the field of study. The nature and extent of this work and when it is to be undertaken within the program of study shall be determined by the major program.

Work for this degree is not required to be done specifically at the University Park campus. A complete program of study can be pursued at Penn State Harrisburg, Penn State Great Valley, Penn State Erie, or through the World Campus.

M.E.P.C.--Additional Specific Requirements

The Master of Environmental Pollution Control (M.E.P.C.) is an intercollege professional degree program designed to improve competence in various fields of the control, management, and prevention of environmental pollution. The degree should be distinguished from the research-oriented program that leads to the academic degree of master of science, since the M.E.P.C. emphasizes application, analysis, and synthesis of knowledge rather than creating new information through traditional research.

A minimum of 30 graduate credits is required, of which 20 must be earned at the campus where the degree program is offered. Special requirements include 11-12 credits of core courses covering air pollution, water quality, solid/hazardous waste management, and policy/risk assessment. At least 18 credits at the 500 level or above (with at least 6 credits in 500 level) must be included in the program, which includes 1 credit of E P C 590 and up to 3 paper-writing (596) credits offered through the student's department of affiliation.

A scholarly master's paper must be completed by all M.E.P.C. candidates. It must be of considerable proportion and must demonstrate the ability to formulate objectives, acquire and document relevant information, critically analyze, draw logical conclusions, and relate findings to professional problems and practices.

M.F.A.--Additional Specific Requirements

The programs leading to the Master of Fine Arts degree provide professional training in art, creative writing, and theatre. The M.F.A. is one of two terminal degrees in the arts. (The other is the research-oriented Ph.D.) The M.F.A. is a 48- to 60-credit degree and usually requires two to three years to complete.

The greater number of credits in the major should be at the 500 level, but the needs of the student will be considered in arranging the best combination of courses and research for preparing the candidate in a particular field.

A professional creative project is required. This project will include a monograph (an artist's statement for the M.F.A. in studio art) in support of the creative or interpretative aspect of the program. Continuance in the program is dependent upon the student's academic and artistic progress as evaluated at the end of each semester.

M.Fin. -- Additional Specific Requirements

The Master of Finance (M.Fin.) degree is intended to provide an advanced and specialized graduate education in finance for individuals who have career interests in financial management, financial analysis, or financial consulting with a focused, intensive curriculum that will develop and expand their quantitative, analytical, and technical expertise.

The M.Fin. degree requires 30 graduate credits-18 in prescribed core courses, 9 in electives, and 3 for a capstone course, including a research paper, which provides a culminating experience for students to develop their analytical abilities to identify strategies that enhance value creation, building upon knowledge acquired from the core courses.

M.F.R.--Additional Specific Requirements

The Master of Forest Resources (M.F.R.) is a professional degree designed for students who want to specialize in fields of wood products marketing or industries, forest management, silviculture, urban forestry, watershed management, or wildlife and fisheries management. This degree differs from the research-oriented Master of Science degree programs in the School of Forest Resources, because the M.F.R. emphasizes applications, analysis, and synthesis of knowledge rather than creating new information through more traditional types of research. This program is especially attractive to returning students interested in gaining state-of-the-art information rather than thesis research in their specialized field.

Students who have baccalaureate degrees in forestry, wood products, or wildlife and fisheries may complete the M.F.R. degree requirements in one year, whereas those with degrees in related fields generally require longer because of deficiencies in prerequisite undergraduate courses.

A minimum of 30 graduate credits (400- to 500-level courses) is required, of which 20 credits must be earned at an established graduate campus of the University, with at least 18 credits as formal courses (excluding paper writing, colloquia, and independent studies) related to forest resources, wood products, and wildlife and fisheries. At least 18 credits at the 500 level or above (with at least 6 credits in 500 level) must be included in the program, including 6 credits of formal courses. A paper (3 to 6 credits of FOR/W P/W F S 596) and formal oral presentation (1 credit of FOR/W P/WFS 596) are required as part of the 30 credits that demonstrate ability to apply the knowledge gained during the program to the specialized field of interest. The program must also include 3 credits of statistics at the graduate level.

M.G.I.S.--Additional Specific Requirements

The Master of Geographic Information Systems (M.G.I.S.) degree program is for adult professionals who aspire to leadership in the GIS profession but who are able to study only part-time and at a distance.

MGIS is a 35-credit program. Six to 9 credits are earned through an independent project that culminates in a formal public presentation attended by the student's academic adviser. The independent project demonstrates students' ability to apply advanced knowledge and skills in a way that makes a substantial contribution to their professional work.

Designed in consultation with an advisory board of experienced professionals in industry, government, and private practice, the MGIS curriculum nurtures not only technical competence but also the articulacy, analytical skills, and professionalism required for leadership in any organization.

Throughout the program students create and maintain personal e-portfolios that chronicle their achievements, outline long-term professional development strategies, and foster meaningful interactions among fellow students and faculty members.

M.H.A.--Additional Specific Requirements

Penn State's Department of Health Policy and Administration helps students prepare for positions in health care organizations, the nation's second-largest and fastest-growing industry. Students take 46 preselected Health Policy and Administration credits and 3 credits of electives selected in consultation with an adviser. Students are required to complete a ten-week residency in a health care practice setting. For full-time students, this is completed during the summer between the first and second years of academic study.

Penn State Harrisburg--Based on eight prescribed core courses defined as the foundation of administration in health care, the degree program is designed for part-time professional students already engaged in, or interested in, health administration careers. Three years of relevant experience is an admission requirement. If the applicant's GPA is less than 3.0, GRE or GMAT scores are required.

A reflective paper will be submitted as a part of this credit requirement.

M.L.A.--Additional Specific Requirements

The Master of Landscape Architecture program is structured as advanced scholarly inquiry within the professional discipline. The intent is to provide specialized expertise in a niche area of landscape architecture to individuals who already have completed a practice-oriented professional program. Prospective students must hold a degree from an accredited program (or foreign equivalent) in landscape architecture or architecture.

Penn State's MLA program offers particular opportunities for study in four expertise areas: community and urban design, through affiliation with the Hamer Center for Community Design Assistance; ecological issues with emphasis on watershed stewardship, through affiliation with the Center for Watershed Stewardship; design computing, through affiliation with the Stuckeman Center for Design Computing; and landscape history, through affiliation with the Historic Places Initiative.

Students may choose one of two curricular tracks in the MLA: a practicum-oriented option in one of the four centers, or pursuit of a unique independent study in conjunction with a center topic or faculty research. In both tracks, students pursue individual inquiry intended to contribute to advancement of the profession: a paper (or papers) in the option track, and in the independent track a major project that forms the focus of the student's curriculum.

A minimum of 44 credits is required, at least 34 credits at University Park campus: 19 credits are studio/research, 4 are in seminar, 21 are supporting electives. The majority of the course work must be at the 500 level.

COMM 597A Cross-Cultural Strategic Communication (3) Most theoretical frameworks used in persuasive communication research are based on empirical insights derived from Western samples. This is particularly true in the case of strategic communication. The class brings into focus issues related to the cross-cultural generalizability (or lack thereof) of such frameworks and the practices they inform. It will focus on strategic communication, defined broadly as the programmatic use of mediated messages by corporations, brands and other institutions, to alter public beliefs, attitudes and behaviors. We will discuss the role that culturally-induced differences in thinking and feeling have in determining the publics' responses to persuasive campaign messages.

COMM 597B Ethnography in Communications Research (3) This course provides an introduction to ethnography (ethno- = Greek for "nation", used to refer to the study of people or cultures; -graphy = "writing," used to denote scientific descriptions), engaging closely with discussions and debates about ethnographic theory and method related to research, ethics, and the politics of representation. The ethnographic method, which includes a wide array of approaches, developed primarily within the fields of cultural anthropology, fieldwork sociology, ethnomusicology and more recently, communication studies, and is utilized to obtain a deeper understanding of the behaviors and belief systems of people in a variety of social settings as a means for more acutely conceptualizing the complex social, cultural, and political-economic processes which shape and structure how our realities are defined.

Effective: Spring 2007

INTER 951 Introduction to Transnational Law and Legal Issues (3) This course will introduce the student to the nature of transnational law and to issues that lawyers will confront when legal issues transcend national borders. The course commences with an examination of the legal complexities of interactions (including economic transactions, civil litigation, and movement of people) in which national law, international law and private law may all simultaneously play a part. It examines the way in which private law, national law and international play a role in a number of different sorts of transactions, from simple organizations in regulating private behavior on a global basis.

INTER 958 Comparative Constitutional & Public Law (3) The principal objective of this course is to provide students with a greater understanding of how their country's body of constitutional law is shaped by history, institutions, and current values. The comparative project, by focusing on narrow differences between two very similar countries, allows students to move beyond an acceptance of basic premises of constitutional law as "natural" or "inherent." As an important dividend, students will gain basic knowledge of foundational concepts in the legal landscape of their country's largest trading partner, hopefully providing students with a comparative advantage in seeking employment with government offices and private firms whose clients engage in substantial cross-border transactions.

Effective: Summer 2011 Ending: Summer 2016

By "law" we mean formal legislation, customary rules, relevant international legal rules, legal doctrine, and anything else regarded by the Russian State or by Russian jurists as comprising part of the "law." For our purposes "legal institutions" encompass all law enforcement agencies or any other agencies of the State or empowered by the state which are concerned with the law in any manner whatsoever, including educational institutions.

globalization upon the process of litigation. Finally, the course will consider issues such as advising multi-national clients, obtaining discovery internationally, and litigating complex cases.
Effective: Summer 2011

INTER 969 International Organizations (2) International organizations play an influential role in the world today. Just a few of the fields they address are peacemaking and peacekeeping, labor relations, food production and distribution, education, health, economic development, monetary affairs, international trade, civil aviation, tele- communications, protection of intellectual property and nuclear energy. This course will examine lawmaking and regulation by international organizations, the regulatory impact of governance by these organizations, issues of legal personality, membership, participation, rights of members and termination of membership, as well as enforcement and dispute settlement. Focus will be on the United Nations and its specialized agencies, including the World Health Organization, the Food and Agriculture Organization, UNESCO and the Inter- national Labor Organization.

The goal is to provide the student with a basic understanding of the fundamental, and perhaps fundamentally different, approaches taken by governments in the United States and in the European communities to the regulation of the corporation. The course materials concentrate on the formal sources of law and thereafter highlight some ways in which the difference in approach is manifested in actual regulation.
Prerequisite:

INTER 974 Civil Law From Empire to Union (3) The most important issue of Civil Law today is its Worldview and its perspectives on Citizenship as well as on International Justice. In other words, particularities of the Civil Law sustain a worldview that stems from Roman Law-traditions and parctices of the Roman Empire. These pertain to more recent legal developments taking place in a unifying Europe. The profiles of the major functionaries in today's Civil Law domain: judges, attorneys, EU civil servants and administrators mirror such traditions. This course is not restricted to a traditional comparative perspective. Means are provided for a correct and effective transnational communication between legal professionals. To study Civil Law and EU Law implies an approach, understanding and management of the electronic means to communicate with its citizens, institutions and courts. The EU website is an outstanding instrument to understand the structures within lawyers must operate.
Effective: Summer 2011

INTER 975 History of the Western Legal Tradition (3) This course will provide an overview of Western legal systems in ancient, medieval, early modern and modern times.
Effective: Summer 2010

INTER 976 Maritime Law (3) Initial consideration of peculiarly American Admiralty jurisdiction and practice, after which a survey of substantive rules of the general maritime law respected by shipping and trading nations is essayed. Carriage of goods by water (including bills of lading, charter parties, and general average), collisions, salvage, and seafarers' personal injuries are treated as discrete subjects with warranties of seaworthiness, applicability of multilateral treaties, harmonizing effects of worldwide London insurance markets, and modern English precedent being recurring themes.
Effective: Spring 2002

INTER 977 Transnational Law (3) This course will introduce the student to transnational law, defined as the law of non-state governance systems, that have emerged in the context of globalization.
Effective: Spring 2014

INTER 978 Dynamics of International Economic Order: Law, Politics, and Power Law (3) Dynamics of International Economic Order examines the cross-cutting relationship between political power and global governance. To this end, the course considers three inter-related sets of issues: first, how nation-states define international economic order through the creation of legal frameworks and rules-based regimes for cross-border trade, investment, and monetary relations; second, how shifts in the international distribution of economic and political power impact these frameworks and regimes; and third, how great powers-in the contemporary context more specifically, the United States (the emblematic established power) and China (the paradigmatic rising power)--approach global economic governance as part of their grand strategies to advance their interests and enhance their international position.

Prerequisite: Concurrent: LARCH 499B

LARCH 499E (IL) People and Protected Areas (3) LARCH 499E is a three-credit seminar that aims to introduce students to key issues associated with communities, community design, biodiversity conservation, and the interface of people and conservation in the vicinity of Udzungwa Mountains National Park in south-central Tanzania. The format of the course is reading and discussion, where students read assigned literature and then contribute to discussions led by faculty, both to demonstrate their understanding of the reading assignments and to begin to explore key issues introduced by those readings. Students also write two papers, the first examining the interface of rural land use planning, community design, and biodiversity conservation; and the second focusing on biodiversity conservation in the context of human settlement near Udzungwa Mountains National Park. Students evaluation is based on seminar participation and the two papers.

Effective: Summer 2016 Ending: Summer 2016

LARCH 499F (IL) Community Design in the Vicinity of Udzungwa Mountains (5) LARCH 499F is a five-credit course that focuses on student research projects associated with communities along the eastern boundary of Udzungwa Mountains National Park. We have purposefully maintained a general definition for the course to allow students to design projects that best suit their interests and skills. For example, some students may focus on evaluating existing village configurations and propose new designs that help villagers better meet their daily needs. Other students, in turn, may focus on developing a more marketable park that attracts larger numbers of visitors who stay in or near the park for longer periods of time--generating more income that ultimately will find its way, in part, to local communities.
Effective: Summer 2016 Ending: Summer 2016

LARCH 499G (IL) The Contribution of Service-Learning to Students and Community (1) LARCH 499G is a one-credit course designed to enable students to reflect on what for most will be their first opportunity to visit and work in rural East Africa. It involves the development of daily journals to record reflections on their evolving awareness of Tanzania and the challenges that people and conservation face in the less-developed country. The journals provide a foundation for reflections about one or more issues that interest each--maybe (though not necessarily) something close to the focus of the specific education abroad experience involved (e.g., the relationship between people and protected areas in south-central Tanzania), maybe international development in general, or maybe another topic. The journals also should be important personally: In all likelihood, this six-week period will expose students to places, people, and challenges that they have never seen in person.
Effective: Summer 2016 Ending: Summer 2016

LARCH 500 Environmental and Ecological Conditions in Regional Landscape (1) Landscape architectural field trips within the Centre Region.

Each case is tried before a jury and judge from a Pennsylvania or federal court. All trials are videotaped in their entirety.

Effective: Summer 2013

SKILS 952 Strategic Legal Research (3) This course is designed to provide students with an advanced understanding of ways lawyers use primary and secondary legal research sources and finding tools to successfully represent their clients. An emphasis is placed on the development of effective legal research strategies that take into account choice of format (e.g., the relative advantages and disadvantages of print and electronic sources), cost/benefit analysis of format choice, evolving approaches by law firms and private practitioners to billable research hours, use of computerized tools to organize research results, and presentation of research results to case supervisors. Course content will be presented in a hybrid format consisting of two hours per week of in-class meetings with the remaining credit to be completed by coursework outside scheduled class time through online and written assignments.

Effective: Fall 2012

Prerequisite:

SKILS 954 Pretrial Advocacy (2) Students work with case files through written exercises and classroom simulations to gain a thorough understanding of the procedural rules and advocacy tools used in the pretrial stages of litigation. The course grade is based upon class participation and the written exercises.

Effective: Summer 2013

SKILS 955 Evidence (3) This course presents evidence in trials under the Federal Rules of Evidence, at common law and in equity and with reference to administrative bodies. The reasoning from which rules arise in areas including relevancy, competency, privilege, examination of witnesses, writing, the hearsay rule and its exceptions, burden of proof, presumptions, judicial notice, and constitutional evidence problems is also addressed.

Effective: Fall 2006

SKILS 957 Client Counseling (2) This course introduces students to the dynamics of a productive attorney- client relationship, the goals of interviewing and counseling, and structures and techniques that can be used to achieve those goals. The focus is on developing students' skills in interviewing and counseling. Instruction consists of assigned reading, problem-solving exercises, group discussion, and practice through simulations. Client Counseling is one of the core courses for the Certificate in Dispute Resolution and Advocacy. Preference is given to students seeking the Certificate in Dispute Resolution and Advocacy.

Effective: Summer 2011

SKILS 958 Conflict of Laws (3) This course examines the legal rules that have developed for resolving conflict-of-law problems. Course time is split roughly equally between domestic and international topics.

Effective: Spring 2016

SKILS 959 Mediation (3) This course examines the legal and ethical issues involved in mediation and develops students' skills as mediators and as attorneys representing clients in the process.

Effective: Fall 2004

Prerequisite:

SKILS 960 Negotiation/Mediation (3) This course combines the law and ethics of negotiation, mediation and settlement with economic and psychological bargaining theory and regular hands-on practice in representing clients in negotiation and mediation. Instruction consists of assigned reading, a series of simulations and exercises (including drafting a resulting contract), written negotiation planning and self-evaluation, feedback, and group discussion.

Effective: Summer 2011

SKILS 962 The U.S. Law of Arbitration (3) This course provides an introduction to the domestic law and practice of arbitration. It assesses the statutory and decisional law basis for arbitration, especially the provisions of the Federal Arbitration Act. It investigates the central doctrinal issues in the field: the enforceability of unilaterally-imposed arbitration agreements, the arbitrability of statutory rights - in particular, civil rights matters, and the use of contract to establish the law of arbitration between the arbitrating parties. Emphasis is placed upon practical problems that have emerged in the practice of arbitration law: the selection of arbitrators, the use of discovery and evidence-gathering in arbitral proceedings, and the content of arbitration agreements. The course also addresses the new uses of arbitration in the consumer, health, and employment fields.

Effective: Spring 2010

SKILS 964 Intensive Legal Writing and Drafting (2) This course develops students' skills in common legal writing formats other than memos and briefs. Not intended as a remedial course, this course rather provides an opportunity for students to sharpen legal writing skills with an emphasis on clarity and precision of expression. Weekly writing assignments include a few fully drafted documents (e.g., short will, a short contract, a statute), as well as letters, short pleadings, jury instructions, and other short pieces. Students will concentrate on re-writing and editing their work.
Effective: Summer 2011
Prerequisite:

SKILS 965 Federal Courts (3) This course addresses the relationship of federal courts to administrative agencies and state courts.
Effective: Fall 2005

SKILS 966 Arbitration Workshop (3) The first part is the drafting of arbitral clauses in a variety of circumstantial settings (maritime, labor, commercial, consumer, and employment) in regard to CPR best practices standards and addressing the authority of the arbitrators and the configuration of the arbitral procedure. This process would take several sessions. The second branch would be to view and then construct an arbitration pursuant to one or several of the arbitral clauses. This would require the conduct and architecture of an arbitral trial along with the protocol for its management, both with the arbitrators and the parties. This would take some time as well. Third, the students would be asked to participate in a statutory drafting workshop that reflects their experiences in the two previous branches. They would be asked to evaluate the UNCITRAL Model Law and several national laws of arbitration and arrive at a new and better model law.
Effective: Summer 2011
Prerequisite:

SKILS 967 Federal Court Practice (2) This course introduces contemporary issues in several topical areas of particular interest to litigating in federal courts. The course topics are varied, with the unifying theme being that each topic possesses either particular prominence or exclusive jurisdiction within the country's federal court system. These topics include: the history and organization of the federal courts, the courts' relationship with Congress, the practical dynamics of federal procedure, strategic considerations involved in a litigant's choice of federal court, employment discrimination, federal criminal matters, sentencing, civil rights cases, and habeas.
Effective: Fall 2011

SKILS 968 Judicial Opinion Writing (2) Students will learn about the role of a judicial clerk and how to draft judicial opinions. Students will recognize the impact of written advocacy on judicial opinion writing as they switch roles from advocating as a lawyer to deciding issues raised by the advocates and writing opinions that implement subtle persuasive writing techniques. Students will develop a deeper understanding of the process for creation of legal precedent through opinions, including the impact of standards of review and procedural posture. The course will cover the common forms of judicial writing. With individualized feedback, students will develop precision in self-editing and revision skills and will practice producing concise, clear, and accessible written work.
Effective: Spring 2014
Prerequisite:

SKILS 969 Legal Journalism (2) Students will learn journalistic writing styles to prepare them to contribute accurate and accessible legal information and analysis to general interest and legal trade media as legal analysts or professional journalists. In an interactive workshop setting, students will discuss progress and receive feedback from faculty and fellow students on: (1) identification and refinement of a thesis; (2) developing and implementing a research plan; (3) appropriate use of authority, including legal citation form; and (4) developing and refining a critical perspective and scholarly argument. Students must be concurrently enrolled in a seminar (SEM) course or an independent study (PERSP 996) of at least two credit hours.

SKILS 972 Mediation of Environmental and Public Conflicts (3) Conflicts between parties with different views of "the public good" are often difficult to resolve, especially in the environmental and natural resource arena. The judicial dispute resolution process is often not well-adapted to addressing conflicts among jurisdictions and meeting the interests of the public and private parties affected by the conflict. Mediation and other alternative dispute resolution techniques can be very useful tools in these cases. This experiential course uses case studies and simulations to explore techniques and strategies other than traditional litigation that lawyers can use to represent clients and resolve disputes in these settings.
