TERMS OF USE

The following Terms of Use (the "TOU") for the Report and all PQ Media (PQM) data, analysis and other content defined below in this section apply to ANA, its Alliance for Inclusive and Multicultural Marketing (AIMM), and their executives, officers, directors and employees (known collectively as the "Licensee" henceforth), as well as all current, dues-paying members of the ANA and AIMM, which include client-side marketers and marketing solutions providers and all their respective executives, officers, directors and employees (known collectively as the "Members" henceforth) who are granted access to a copy of the Report via a password-protected area of the ANA's website. These TOU cover all content, data, analysis, information, charts, graphs, research methodologies, algorithms, databases, datasets, market research, support materials, notes, sources, opinion leader panels, forecasts, and any other related materials, resources or assets that were created previously by PQM, those that were developed specifically for this Report, and all content PQM has licensed into the new Report for use by Licensee and its Members (known collectively as the "Content" henceforth).

The TOU specified in Section 1 and the ensuing subsections below permit ANA and AIMM to make the Report available through their website to Members only, and the ANA and AIMM will keep the Report's content behind a password protected area of its site (except for a mutually agreed upon executive summary of the Report, which the Parties agree to make available for public consumption on the ANA's website and shared with press outlets in the promotion of the Report). PQM expects the Licensee and Members to treat this Report and all the Content therein in the same manner they would treat any print, digital, hybrid or other media product or service (ex., book, software, information service) that is licensed from a third-party creator, publisher, developer, producer or content owner. Accordingly, PQM shall include in the Report the necessary copyright information and other information regarding the use and consumption of and access to the Report including, without limitation, the Permitted Uses and Prohibited Uses outlined below.

Permitted Use – The Licensee and Members may use the Content from the Report in perpetuity solely for Licensee's or Members internal business purposes as set forth in this section, and Licensee may make available to Members in perpetuity a copy of the Report through a specific password-protected location on its website. To make a Permitted Use, the Licensee and Members may download the Report to a device (e.g., PC, laptop, tablet, smartphone) and he/she may display a digital copy or print a copy of the Report for his/her internal business purposes. Such purposes may include the use of summary or excerpted Content from the Report in a presentation made to clients employed at external organizations or in a presentation made to media industry stakeholders at a business trade show, provided that any summary use of Content from the Report appropriately cites PQM as the sole source and copyright owner of the Content, except for certain data and/or analysis that is jointly owned by PQM and the ANA or owned by the ANA and provided to PQM in connection with the Report, as specified in Section 2 – Copyright & Intellectual Property. For clarity, PQM agrees that the ANA and AIMM may print, distribute, email, share or mail hard copies of the Report to press outlets and ANA and AIMM Members, subject to the terms of this Agreement).

Prohibited Use – The Licensee and its Members are not permitted to use, copy, print, email, distribute or share the Report or portions of the Content in any form other than the specific uses described in the preceding Permitted Use section with any other individuals or entities that do not meet the definition of Licensee or Members specified in Section 1 – Terms of Use for ANA and AIMM and its Members. If Licensee or its Members would like to use or distribute the Report or any of its Content in a manner that diverges from the uses detailed in the Permitted Use section above, the Licensee or its Members must contact PQ Media to request written permission. Licensee or its Members are not permitted to modify or re-work the Report or its Content in any way, and he/she is prohibited from selling, leasing, renting or sub-licensing the Report in any manner.

Rights – The Licensee is granted the perpetual, nonexclusive, non-transferable right to use and distribute the Report to its Members through a password-protected section of ANA's website, after which Members may use the Report in print or digital format for internal business purposes only, as described in the Permitted Use section. This right to "use the Report" is strictly limited to the authorized uses detailed in the Permitted Use section. PQM reserves all rights not expressly granted to Licensee and its Members in these TOU. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the Licensee acknowledges and agrees that, except as specifically set forth in this paragraph and the ANA Content, PQM retains all right, title and interest to all Content, as defined in the preceding Terms of Use section, that PQM solely developed for the Report, and covered by copyright law, as well as any other related materials and assets described in the Copyright & Intellectual Property section that follows.

As stated in the Terms of Use section, PQM owns all the Content as its defined in Section 1, which includes all data, analysis, information, charts, graphs, research methodologies, algorithms, databases, datasets, market research, support materials, notes, sources, opinion leader panels, forecasts, and any other related materials, resources or assets that were created previously by PQM, and that were developed specifically for this Report, as well as all content PQM has licensed into the new Report for use by Licensee and its Members. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the ANA has the right to use in perpetuity any jointly owned content (as described below) in any form or manner and in any and all media now known or hereafter developed without the prior written consent of PQM.

While the majority of the Content in the Report will be owned solely by PQM, due to PQM already owning the Content or because PQM will develop most of the additional data and analysis developed during the course of this project for the final Report, the exceptions will be certain data, analysis and information, as described below, that will either be jointly owned by PQM and the ANA or solely owned by the ANA (collectively, the "ANA Content")

Specific to data and/or analysis that is jointly owned by PQM and ANA, U.S. copyright law states that co-ownership of copyrighted works based on co-authorship is substantiated by evidence of each author contributing significant copyrightable subject matter to the work. That is, one is not a joint author where the contributions are limited to "ideas, refinements, and suggestions." As it relates to this project, while PQM will research, analyze, synthesize and structure for publication most of the new data and information it does not already own, the ANA's contribution will primarily be feedback to the data and analysis developed by PQM.

However, due to its contribution to the Report, the ANA will jointly own with PQM the demographic and endemic/non-endemic definitions in the Report. In addition, ANA will own the slides it contributes to the Report that prominently display ANA copyrighted material, which will be included in the overall advertising & marketing and general multicultural trend sections. As funding sponsor of the Report, the ANA also will share a co-authorship and copyright credit with PQM that will appear in the Report, with the ANA and/or AIMM prominently displayed on select pages within the Report, particularly on the cover and copyright page.

Due to PQM's ownership of the lion's share of Content in the Report and in accordance with the copyright statutes referenced above, the ANA is precluded from hiring another third-party vendor at any time in the future to prepare the same or substantially similar report or to issue an update to the Report that is based largely on PQM created and owned Content, while only a relatively small amount of the total contents of the Report will be created by the ANA. In addition, copyright law states there must be accountability among co-owners of copyrighted works, in that joint owners have an obligation to account to the other co-owner if one Party attempts to change the copyrighted Content in any manner, such as breaking up chapters or sections of the Report into individual deliverables for end-user consumption or for sale to non-members.

The Licensee and its Members hereby acknowledge and agree that, except for the ANA Content, PQM does now and shall in perpetuity own all intellectual property rights to the Content, including related research methodologies, databases, datasets, market research and support materials, sources, opinion leader panels, analysis, charts, graphs, tables, algorithms, forecasts and projections, notes, and any other materials and assets created by PQM and/or included in the Report by PQM. The Licensee and acknowledges and agrees that they shall not at any time during the Term of this Agreement or at any time thereafter challenge, claim or contest the validity of any right, title or interest of PQM in and to the Content or any other of PQM's data, analysis or other information licensed into the Report.

Information "As Is" – All information and data contained in the Report are obtained by PQ Media from sources that PQ Media believes to be accurate and reliable. However, errors and omissions in the Report may result from human error, technical malfunctions, electronic or digital conversion glitches and/or transmission of textual and numeric data.

METHODOLOGY

PQ Media's proven research methodology and proprietary mapping system – PQ Medianomics™ – utilizes proprietary data collection techniques, algorithmic models and analytical approaches to track, analyze and forecast spending, consumption and trends in all major media platforms and channels of the media and entertainment industries. PQ Media's system, driven by our SpendTrac, UsageTrac, and InfoTrac databases, as well as our exclusive Global Opinion Leader Panel (GOLP), layers the impact of key data and variables, like economic, demographic, behavioral, technological and regulatory.

In defining, structuring, sizing and forecasting global industries and markets, such as multicultural media, PQ Media seeks input from our exclusive GOLP members, which includes more than a thousand executives at media & entertainment companies, financial institutions, consulting firms, media agencies, and brands regarding various data and information driving key trends and growth in campaign media spending. We also examine thousands of public and private documents from more than a 1,000 sources pertaining to regional and market specific trends and data in multicultural media, the overall advertising & marketing ecosystem, economic sectors and demographic profiles, and any other factors, such as technology penetration rates, that might affect the multicultural media industry, overall advertising & marketing environment, the economy, and consumer media usage behavior and spending patterns.

PQ Media's proven econometric methodology is set apart from other media research sources in numerous ways. PQ Media doesn't use standard rate card data and estimated impressions as the methodological foundation of our spending and growth algorithms. Our consistent, comprehensive and in-depth mapping of the entire media and entertainment landscape provides industry stakeholders with a complete picture of how spending and usage patterns of consumers, businesses, brands and agencies are changing at an increasingly rapid pace, driven by tech innovation and emerging digital media.

Specific to the U.S. Multicultural Media Forecast 2019, PQ Media interviewed over 100 GOLP members in confidence (who are not listed in this report to preserve their anonymity). We were fortunate to be introduced to many new national multicultural media GOLP stakeholders by executives at the Association of National Advertiser's (ANA) Alliance for Inclusive and Multicultural Marketing (AIMM). Other GOLP members were contacted after PQ Media analysts uncovered interesting information relating to a specific multicultural demographic category. For example, gambling is very popular among Asia-Americans, and we reached out to a casino GOLP member to ascertain his/her company's marketing budget aimed at this demographic and which specific advertising & marketing channels were used. Among the African American community, diabetes and heart disease are concerns that led us to reach out to a health care GOLP member on marketing techniques used to reach this demographic. The current political environment that is impacting Hispanics required an inquiry to a GOLP member who discussed the rising marketing budgets for immigration information centers and legal defense funds. PQ Media also contacted other GOLP members to aid us on specific sections of the report, particularly relating to local non-endemic revenues. For example, our analysts spoke with media operators and agencies in cities that the U.S. Census Bureau data showed as being multiculturally over-indexed (2x) compared with the overall population. For example, we contacted media operators in Detroit, where African Americans over-index and are featured in media kits, to ascertain an approximate share of inventory that are considered "quaranteed" African American media buys.

In this document that accompanies the full report, PQ Media lists over 40,000 primary and second sources (see following pages for types of sources). There were various methods used to collect data and information from these sources. To identify multicultural brands and products, we started with a content analysis of media operator's content to ascertain which brands were associated with endemic and non-endemic multicultural content, such as ads on endemic television programs and radio formats, in ethnic newspaper and magazines, as well as retail outlets like bodegas, with point-of-purchase displays, product sampling, and loyalty programs. Content analysis was also employed to identify multicultural brands and products through agency case studies, ad & marketing award ceremonies, and sponsorships of multicultural events.

To identify multicultural media operators and content, PQ Media analysts used a myriad of methods. They examined hundreds of directories that listed operators specific to a culture, such as media aimed at Ethiopians. They found lists that ranked multicultural content by revenues, usage and/or popularity, such as Michael Jackson's rank (#1) among dead celebrities in annual brand licensing revenues. We identified leading influencers by recommendations from multicultural media providers, such as "must-read" blogs on Filipino-American cuisine, and their inclusion in award ceremonies, such as the Hispanic Heritage Awards, and important national institutions, like the Major League Baseball Hall of Fame.

To develop our algorithms and forecasts, PQ Media expanded its InfoTrac database with information specific to the three demographic categories, media buying preferences, and media platform usage. Our analysts examined thousands of documents, including publications from the ANA and AIMM, like The Case for Change. Many GOLP members shared reports cited in marketing plans and pitches, such as government data and demographic reports on multicultural media usage. We downloaded dozens of whitepapers with information on specific demographics, such as analysis of streaming audio usage among multicultural audiences. We included academic research because it offers groundbreaking studies in journals and conference papers on consumer behavior and media usage among specific demographics, such as a study published by one university on television advertising by food companies aimed at African American and Hispanic children. In preparing the data for the report, PQ Media deal with the following six issues:

- Overall Advertising & Brand Activation Marketing Data: To avoid confusion, PQ Media is the exclusive source for any comparisons to the overall advertising & marketing industry. Data used in charts were extracted from the analysis of the U.S. market in the PQ Media Global Advertising & Marketing Forecast 2018-22 and the breakout of brand activation (see following bullet) from the PQ Media Brand Activation Forecast 2017.
- 2. Advertising & Brand Activation Media Channels: In comparing multicultural media to the overall advertising & marketing ecosystem, select channels were moved based on the AIMM requests. For example, PQ Media includes online & mobile search in marketing media in our reports because this channel is used to engage at the point of decision rather than increase brand awareness, often a distinction that leads to a certain channel being placed into the advertising or marketing sector. AIMM requested that search be included with Pure-Play Digital Advertising. Specific to brand activation marketing, the report listed above was sponsored by the ANA, who requested at the time that certain channels be moved into different brand activation platforms compared with the hierarchy of PQ Media's aforementioned global ad & marketing forecast. For example, point-of-purchase is included in retailer marketing in the brand activation report, but the channel is included in promotional marketing in the global ad & marketing forecast.
- 3. Revenue vs. Internal Spending (See Segmentation & Definitions): When PQ Media prepared the 2016 and 2017 editions of the U.S. Brand Activation Forecast, we were asked to include internal spending by brands such as the value that pharmaceutical companies include in their budgets for the free samples provided to doctors. In the multicultural report, that data is exclusively operator revenue, and excludes internal spending. It should be noted that numerous GOLP members referenced examples of internal spending that impacts marketing budgets, particularly the use of translation services for bilingual campaigns and hiring multicultural actors when broadcast ads with the same copy were produced in both English and the native languages.
- 4. Total Market Approach: After the Great Recession, many brands switched from a multicultural media buying strategy to a total market approach for efficiency purposes. Total market approach is defined as a marketing approach followed by corporations with their trusted internal and external partners which proactively integrates diverse segment considerations. This is done from inception through the entire strategic process and execution, with the goal of enhancing value and growth effectiveness. In marketing communications this could lead to one fully integrated cross-cultural approach, individual segment approaches and/or both in many cases, but always aligned under one overarching strategy. As a result, these brands discontinued multicultural media buying, like buying time on a Univision program to reach Hispanic audiences. While, this practice is still in place, according to multiple GOLP members, numerous brands began to reverse their decision to exclude multicultural media approximately 18 months ago. These brands reported to our GOLP members that the use of the total market approach led to a decline in market share and/or less engagement with multicultural audiences. Total market approach is NOT included in the multicultural media data.
- 5. Non-Endemic Advertising & Marketing: PQ Media was extremely diligent in ascertaining whether a specific DMA or content met the criterion of being over-indexed (2x the U.S. Census Bureau data for the demographic). However, there were two instances in which PQ Media had to alter its algorithms. The first instance is specific to the Asian-American demographic, in which many brands reported that the breakout to a specific culture, such as Korean Americans, proved to be too small to provide scale, that no effort was made to target this audience regardless whether they over-indexed. The exception was the Winter Olympics, held in South Korea that over-indexed by more than 10x. (The same phenomenon is expected during the 2020 Summer Olympics being held in Japan.) The second instance is specific to colleges and universities, in which there is a formula used by the U.S. Department of Education to determine whether an institution will be included in the "Minority Serving Institutions Program" because it over-indexes on specific multicultural student populations, most notably Historically Black Colleges (HBCUs).
- 6. Institutions/Celebrities Listed Both as a Brand & Operator: There are many instances in this source list document that an institution or celebrity will be listed two or more times. They are considered a brand when the institution or celebrity spent marketing dollars to reach a multicultural audience, like a college sponsoring a STEM recruiting conference or a celebrity with a cosmetic business. They are considered an operator when they generate revenues thorough media channels, like digital out-of-home ads on a college stadium scoreboard and a basketball star signing a brand licensing agreement with a sneaker company. To distinguish when an institution or celebrity was generating revenue as an operator, PQ Media added "Brand Licensing" to the institution or person's name.

SOURCES

PQ Media attempted to identify as many primary and secondary sources as possible related to multicultural media. The list of over 40,000 sources follows on page 8. To meet Sarbanes-Oxley requirements, all sources listed in the report were found in the public domain.

The list of sources begins on the following page. Every effort was made by PQ Media to avoid duplications of sources, but there might a few instances in which the same source is listed twice. For example, multiple sources listed the same person or institution but with different spellings, such as one source combining the words (ex. AdWeek) and the other source did not (ex. Ad Week). Also, another source might be listed twice, once in English (Bilingual Review) and another in the native language (Revista Bilingue). There might also be some misspellings, particularly of foreign words, and we apologize in advance if this occurred. There are, however, some words that had to be misspelled on purpose because the source entry could not fit onto one line and select words were abbreviated.

PQ Media acknowledges in advance that this list of sources is not complete due to budgetary considerations and resource allocation to expand the content analysis of brand marketers in more designated market areas (DMAs) other than New York City's market where PQ Media's offices are located. Additionally, we set a deadline to complete the research for this forecast in order to write the report in a timely manner and prepare the final deliverable to the ANA and AIMM. Since that date, more sources have been uncovered, but not included in this source document for those reasons. For example, while working on a separate project not associated with the ANA, one of our analysts discovered a directory of associations that would have possibly expanded the following list by a few hundred smaller associations serving the multicultural market, such as another 5-to-10 Ethiopian associations in addition to the dozen or so already captured in the list from other sources. We could have also searched for additional advertisers in the most recent editions of print media published since the deadline and viewed more commercials on multicultural programs that aired on endemic and non-endemic television networks and OTT video.
