

Table of Contents

Forewords	4
Geek Cities Get the Job Done by Michele Jolin, Managing Partner, Results for America	4
We Need More “Geek Cities” by Mayor Julián Castro, San Antonio, Texas	6
Philanthropy Can Help Cities Develop Results-Focused Initiatives by Patrick T. McCarthy, President and CEO, Annie E. Casey Foundation	7
Executive Summary	9
Geek Cities: How Smarter Use of Data and Evidence Improves Lives	12
#1 Measure What Matters	16
Miami-Dade County Public Schools uses data to boost student achievement	18
Denver Public Schools uses data to drive continuous improvement	20
New York City uses data to tackle chronic absenteeism	22
#2 Build the Evidence Base	25
New York City’s Center for Economic Opportunity identifies and scales what works to fight poverty	25
Project Oracle establishes itself as London’s “children’s and youth evidence hub”	28
#3 Invest in What Works	30
San Antonio’s new pre-K initiative seeks to use evidence every step of the way	31
Providence intervenes at the community level to get better outcomes for youth	32
Baltimore’s B’More for Healthy Babies uses evidence-based programs to reduce infant mortality	34

#4 Budget for What Works	36
A new way of budgeting in Baltimore dramatically changes how funding decisions are made	36
Recommendations	39
Actions for city leaders	39
Actions for federal, state, and philanthropic partners to support cities	42
The Path Forward	46
Acknowledgments	47
Appendix	48
Glossary of Terms	48
Overview of City Innovations Featured in This Report	50